Betty Anne Waters '98, Esq.

Doctor of Laws, Honoris Causa

Legal Activist

B.A. Community College of Rhode Island

J.D. Roger Williams University School of Law

Betty Anne Waters '98, Esq., had only a job as a waitress, her high school equivalency, two children and a stack of bills when she set out to rescue her brother Kenneth Waters, who served 18 years in prison for a murder he did not commit. Now she has a college degree, a Roger Williams law degree and the stunning achievement of having succeeded, after nearly two decades, in overturning her brother's conviction.

In 2010, Waters' story was turned into a major motion picture, "Conviction" (2010). The movie, starring Hilary Swank as Waters, tells how she doggedly searched for exculpatory DNA evidence that had supposedly been destroyed; how she enlisted noted defense attorney Barry Scheck and his Innocence Project to join in her quest; and how she, Scheck (played by Peter Gallagher in the film) and her RWU Law classmate Abra Rice '98 (played by Minnie Driver) went from house to house, convincing witnesses to admit they had lied under police pressure.

Waters now volunteers for the Innocence Project, working to exonerate the wrongfully accused. She speaks out against the death penalty, lobbies for legislation on criminal-justice reform and evidence preservation, and meets with prisoners who have been freed. As Swank recently told the New York Times, "I don't think Betty Anne feels like she put herself on hold. I think she feels: 'That's my life. That's what I was here to do – to help and be of service to people who are innocent.'"

Waters lives with her family in Bristol, R.I.
