DICK GREGORY COMES TO RWC

Famed comedian, human rights activist, and social satirist Dick Gregory is coming to RWC Thursday evening November 19th. Gregory has been noted as an author, lecturer, recording artist, actor, philosopher, and political activist. Gregory participated in the sixties civil rights movement, and has gained recognition for his tireless work for world peace, hunger, and the rights of the American Indian.

New Development Director Sees Exciting Times Ahead For RWC

by Sue Costello

Gary Keighley is enthusiastic about his new job at RWC. He said, "I hope it becomes a permanent position. The people in the office are very highly qualified and motivated."

The Acting Director of Institutional Advancement comments, "It's a very exciting time for the college. Things are going to be moving very quickly." The excitement which Keighley refers to involves the college's first major capital gains campaign. A new library will be financed with the money that is donated and Keighley notes, "We will leave no stone unturned."

Keighley and his staff intend to contact foundations and alumnae in an attempt to raise the money needed for the new building. Their plans include naming rooms after donors and Keighley did not rule out the possibility of naming the entire library after a substantial donor. He commented on the amount of twenty-three million dollars, which Keller mentioned in his recent report. Keighley said that money is not a deficit, but represents "a kind of a wish list for the needs of the college."

As acting director, Keighley is presently "analyzing the office as it is." He finds no difficulty in accepting a job that may be only temporary. He states, "That's not my style. My style is to just jump in and get both feet wet." He sees no problem with coming into an office that lost two previous directors amidst controversy. Keighley speaks positively about working in a college atmosphere after spending five years at Bryant College and three at the R.I. Historical Society in similar positions.

The acting director's plans for the college include the establishment of an alumnae relations program. "We'll have four or five chapters nationwide," Keighley says.

Veterans Day Ceremony

By Michael Sisco

Cadets of the RWC contingent of Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) will be conducting a Veterans Day Memorial Service at 12:00 pm on Tuesday, November 10th, in front of the Administration Building on the RWC campus. All members of the RWC community are invited to attend.

Details regarding the content of the ceremony have not been released to the press at this time. Veterans Day will be observed on Wednesday, November 11th. No classes will be held on this day.

Student Senate Candidates Open Forum

by Melissa Juliano

On Monday, November 2nd at 7:45 PM, RWC held a Student Senate Open Forum in the cafeteria, which was broadcasted over WQRI. Senior, Enrique Perla was the moderator. Twenty candidates - from which one was medically excused and one did not attend - ran for fifteen positions on the Student Senate. The audience that attended took an active role in the Forum by expressing opinions and letting their voices be heard. The candidates made it clear, to the audience that if elected, they would take charge and make improvements in the following issues: extended health services, the reopening of the Rat., longer library hours, I.D.s for Almeida and Commuter students, more security, better parking situations and most importantly, better communication between students and administration that would lessen the apathy considerably.

Questions from the floor pertaining to those issues were answered by the candidates with replies aimed at revitalizing spirit here at RWC. As far as apathy is concerned, Pia LaMariana stated, "A question box or senate newsletter and flyers describing each club's activities offered at RWC would be the most beneficial." Jennifer Malouf added: "We need you. It is important for the student body to give the new Senate ideas and attend various events. Students must take the first initial step. A change in attitude would help strengthen school spirit."

"A lot of people love to bitch at everything the school has to offer. If they spent more time taking an active role in student affairs and attending events, there would be no apathy. Initiative is the key ingredient to make RWC a more memorable place for all of us!" stated Dave Joyce. When upperclassmen candidates were asked why it took them so long to revive the senate Jim Cyr simply stated

"We must stop dwelling on the past and think about what the future senate will do to make changes. The primary factor is to get away from negative attitudes and find positive attitudes. There are several means of communication which can be used. These include: the electronic bulletin board, the Messenger, the suggestion box, and posters. If people are involved, it [the Senate] will not crash again." When the moderator asked what the candidates first priorities were, Tracy Ginna retorted "Reaching the student body is our number one priority. Getting the senate strongly re-established. Making Almeida students feel more in touch with the campus, are other strong concerns."

One of the biggest list toppers was the statement by Dan Slater

"Everyone wants to drink and nobody wants to get AIDS!! Because this is a private institution, we the students should form our own rules about the drinking policy." Debi Elliot stated "If the students lead, the college will follow!"

Most of the forum and all of the candidates agreed on the fact that security on campus is almost nil. Jim Cyr and Tracy Ginna elaborated by stating "Cars drive right by the guard shack and it is simple for anyone to get on campus! We need real security guards to replace the guards that resemble Wells-Fargo by just walking away from apparent problems. To close this issue, Robyn Clark stated, "If you can't feel safe in your college-community, where can you feel safe?"

In closing, the candidates reiterated "Remember to come forward with ideas once the senate is formed. Without a senate, school spirit will die! Students are welcomed to voice their opinions at the senate meetings."

Letters to the Editor

HAIL TO THE CHIEFS

The new Senate is finally formed. Unfortunately, it took the total collapse of the previous one for people to realize the need for student representation, and, most important, involvement.

For some time now, RWC has been suffering a slow death from a plague of indifference, a pestilence of indecision. Student activity and involvement is on death row, waiting for the warden to throw the switch. Maybe the new senate will breathe new life into the bed-ridden spirit of RWC.

It is involvement, and later on commitment, that strengthens any organization, creating respect and a spirit of work and cooperation. The new Senate has the task of combining the efforts of the different clubs, organizations and individuals to revive "school spirit" that most people claim is non-existent.

It is the Senate that is the mouthpiece of the students, guaranteeing our voice isn't lost among the special interests of faculty and administrators. The Senate that is the watch-dog for our rights and the protector of our interests.

In return, it is the students' obligation to support their Senate, not only in its everyday activities, but also in its efforts to revive our campus community. It is the students' obligation to vote, speak up, and take an active part in campus politics.

The Messenger salutes the new Senate, and those individuals whose hard work has brought this very important organization back to life at RWC. At the same time we invite and challenge every student to get involved. Be a vital part of the RWC community!

Dear Editor,

It has come to my attention, on more than one occasion that a vast number of R.W.C. students firmly believe with all their heart and soul that the scrambled eggs served for breakfast every day are not real. (i.e. "Powdered", "Artie Fishal")

To those students I ask these questions: When were you in the Army? How do you know what powdered eggs taste like as opposed to real eggs?

I state here and now for the record and all concerned, that the eggs used for scrambled, omelets, quiche and fried eggs are real, 100% grade A, farm fresh chicken embryos.

To those students who still do not believe this, I hereby eloquently, cordially and any other "ly" invite you to come into the kitchen anytime and help me crack 'em or better yet you crack 'em yourself.

Thank you for your time and keep those cards and letters coming in folks!

THE EGG MAN

Dear Editor,

The new Student Senate has been elected and they can begin their work of representing and advocating for students. The crisis of no Student Senate has passed, and we breathe a sign of relief that "somehow" a new Senate was formed.

But the "somehow" is important, for it was a group of students who were upset by the demise of the Senate last spring and took the great risk of caring enough and trying to make a difference. We all care, but are not often moved to action because it is so risky. The met twice a week for eight weeks, educating themselves on how the Senate functioned, deciding why the Senate was important, learning how to run an election and getting students interested enough to run. They could have failed after al that work. Their success is to be applauded; their effort and courage is to be admired.

Thank you:

You have proven that individuals who care and try to make a difference, do.

Signed

my homework-back-up-afflicted. Some woman just walked by swinging a key chain. Stop that! Hey, lady, please stop that! A makeup laden girl is now walking over to me. She looks worried. She must have tons of homework also.

"Can you help me, please?" she says cutely.

"Sure."

"I've lost my girlfriend. Have you seen her?" She points to herself. "She looks exactly like me."

I smile enthusiastically. "Yes, I have. Yes, listen, what you should do is go to the card catalogue."

"You mean that tan square thing with all the little handles on it?"

"Exactly, go over to it and look up nuisance. That's n..o..o..s..e..ants... it should be in between Rennaisants and Croissants. Either way she should be there, okay?"

She smiles. "Okay, thanks." Then she goes into the bathroom for a few quick coats, comes out, and tumbles down the stairs. She gets up feeling accomplished, laughing.

Hey, I just felt a raindrop. No, that was one of the juniors over there who are playing around, spitting into books and at people.

Alright, I'm psyched. Someone just brought in a projection t.v. And yet another kid with a walkman, and another. Someone is crinkling paper. Hey, do that one at a time, man. Someone is banging something. Hey that kid's got a skateboard. And I've got some beers in my backpack. "Hey, let me move my homework for you guys, sit down." Boy I wish the library was open more often, it's fun here.

"What?!"

Dear Editor,

I'm on the second floor of the library right now. Someone just walked by me with a walkman on. I think I heard some Bon Jovi blasting from his head. The lights just flicked on and off. Reaction to Keller-Schuyler Proposes Alternative

by Michael Sisco

On October 19, Phil Schuyler, head of the teachers union, submitted a report to President Rizzini entitled Alternate Draft of a Strategic Plan for Roger Williams College. The paper is an alternate proposal to the report submitted by George Keller earlier this year.

In his opening comments, Schuyler admits that most people agree with Keller's key areas of focus, but his proposals may not be accurate. "There is wide agreement with Mr. Keller's assessment that Roger Williams College is at a crucial point in its history and must make a number of key decisions and undertake a number of new initiatives if it is to move forward and grow as an institution of higher education."

As Mr. Keller would probably be the first to admit, however, it is difficult for an outside expert, working with data supplied by the College and impressions gathered through a few on-campus visits involving contact with a very limited portion of the college community, to capture all the detail and potential of an institution."

Schuyler claims that this report is an attempt to "build on Mr. Keller's initial effort." Schuyler does this by focusing on areas that were left questionable in Keller's first draft.

PART 1: Current Situation

Schuyler begins his report by going over a brief history of RWC. His history goes into greater detail than the history relayed in The Keller Report, Schuyler focusing on the later years of RWC's history.

Schuyler defines RWC as it stands today. "Presently, the College has established itself as a stable institution of higher education, with a variety of strong programs, a mature faculty, and an increasingly well-qualified student body drawn primarily from New England and the Middle Atlantic states... Roger Williams has emerged in the past decade as a new kind of four-year college, with the potential of becoming a distinctive and high-quality regional, if not national institution."

Like Keller, Schuyler believes it is time for RWC to make some 'key decisions'. Some issues on which part one touches are the need for a new library, the need to decide on our size (student wise), and we need to define the "nature and limits of its academic program and focus its resources in the specific areas it chooses to emphasize."

Both Schuyler and Keller agree that a major fund raising campaign is in order, and that 'dollar pinching' is not the way to pay off the College's debt ($23,000,000). The figures, however, vary slightly. Keller proposed that forty five million dollars be raised by the academic year 1995. Schuyler proposes only forty million dollars to be raised. This puts a twenty thousand dollar endowment behind each student at RWC.

PART 2: The New Academic Strategy

Schuyler, in the second part of his report, proposes four major changes in the colleges present strategy that more clearly define the words of Keller.

1) "The College needs to shift from being primarily market-driven to mission-driven." RWC must decide upon its strengths and traditions. It should promote the value of these programs, and recruit students in accordance with these values. The College must "seek to be identified with certain fields of study and academic disciplines."

2) "The College needs to shift from a proprietary school mode of financial operation to an arts and sciences college mode." RWC must strive for balanced budgets, and emphasize fund raising, to increase its finances. Fund raising is imperative.

3) "The College needs to clearly determine what its optimum enrollment level should be and work to establish and maintain a student body of this size." The College needs to stabilize its enrollment.

4) "The College needs to make a major effort to strengthen its faculty and administration." Existing faculty and administrators should be encouraged to peak performance, new faculty positions should be filled with qualified candidates, and salaries should be comparable to other colleges in New England.

Schuyler claims the "New Academic Strategy" should be based on the history and traditions of the college, the current strengths of the Colleges academic programs, and the relative competitive position of the college that should make us competitively different from the surrounding colleges in Rhode Island and New England.

Schuyler lists the same basic special attributes of the College as Keller does. He does, however list a few that Keller does not.

Heart to Heart

by Nancy Hood

Dear Reader

When I have asked students what topic they would like to see covered in this column, was a common concern. I hope the following information will be useful to you.

A certain level of stress is normal, invigorating and more important, essential to our existence. In fact it protects and mobilizes us in times of real danger.

Stress is our body's physical, nonverbal, and chemical reactions to circumstances called stressors which can range from life threatening situations such as an automobile accident to a positive event such as a job promotion. "The danger comes when external events overwhelm your coping ability and you start feeling hostile or helpless". Those seem to be "toxic" emotions, says Steven Locke, M.D. Assistant Clinical Professor at Harvard Medical School and author of "The healer within" (Vogue, August 1987) that's when our physical, emotional and spiritual well being and our relationships suffer.

The college years bring their own particular kinds of stressors: academic, peer, and parental pressures, the impact of being in a new environment, financial worries, life stage challenges such as separation from parents and questions about your own identity, values and career direction, and the need for intimate relationships.

What is stressful for one person may not be stressful for another. Recent literature on the subject indicates that it's how we respond to the stressors in our lives, not the number of stressors, that determines whether or not we will become overwhelmed and distressed.

As you are approaching mid-semester point, it may be helpful to take a personal inventory and if you discover that you are becoming over stressed, 1. identify what it is that is stressful for you and 2. look for some ways to reduce your stress level so that it does not get to the point of interfering with your functioning.

The following are signs that you are overstressed: Physical - appetite, change, fatigue, backaches, headaches, digestive upsets, sleep disturbances. Emotional - anxiety, crying spells, depression, frustration, irritability, mood swings. Mental - forgetfulness, poor concentration, lack of creative ideas, negative self talks, boredom, confusion.

Relational - isolation, loneliness, intolerance. Spiritual - emptiness, loss of meaning, cynicism. Sometimes our ways of coping with stress are counter-productive. For example, alcohol and other drug consumption, overeating, overwork, shopping extravaganza's etc may give immediate relief but in the long run, compound the problem. Some healthy ways of managing our stress levels are: regular exercise, good nutrition, getting enough sleep, talking about problems with someone you trust, expression through the arts, meditation or yoga, taking time for yourself each day, planning your time well, balancing work and play, taking on only what you can handle.

If you've gotten this far in reading the column, you've probably been taking mental notes on yourself. How are you doing? Perhaps you've added to my list of symptoms and preventions. What are the signs you recognize in yourself? What ways do you have of coping with stress? Are they productive or counterproductive? Do you feel invigorated and challenged or are you feeling overwhelmed and like you can't get back on track? If the later is true, what are some options? Have you considered talking to someone you trust? How about seeing a counselor or going to a workshop on stress management. Often with some support, you can sort things out and end up feeling stronger and better about yourself.

Anyone wishing to write in with questions or reactions send them to "Heart to Heart" Nancy Hood, c/o the center for Counseling and Student Development, Dorm 1. Your responses will be kept confidential.

For the past several weeks here at RWC there has been no Catholic priest to serve mass. Last year, Father Richard Shivers of St. Joseph's in Newport, served a congregation of over fifty students in the Bay Room every Sunday night at 7:00pm.

So why are there no masses this semester? Karen Haskell, Dean of Students, told the Messenger that Father Shivers transferred and, due to the severe lack of priests, the college has been unable to locate a replacement. "We're not ignoring the problem. We were thrilled when we had masses on campus and we're working toward that end again."

According to Haskell, Joyce Stein, in the RWC counselling center, has been handling the problem. Stein claims that right now the College is examining its options before making a decision on what to do about finding a replacement. She claimed that Shivers had other duties put upon him and was not able to return. Stein submitted a copy of a notice published by the Counselling Center listing Catholic Churches in the area. The notice reads as follows:

Rev. Richard Shivers is no longer on campus or available for Sunday mass. Until further notice, Catholic Mass may be attended at the following local churches:

St. Mary's Rectory
Masses: Daily M-F 8am
330 Wood Street
Saturday-5pm
Bristol (253-3300)
Sunday-8:30am-10:30am

Our Lady of Mt Carmel Rectory
Masses:
Daily M-F 7am-5pm
141 State Street
Saturday-9am-5pm
Bristol (253-9449)
Sunday-7:30am

9:00am
10:30am
7:00pm

Stein also commented that if enough students are interested she would be willing to have an open meeting to discuss the issue.

St. Joseph's Rectory in Newport reported to the Messenger that Father Shivers had been transferred to St. Gregory's in Warwick over the summer. The new pastor claimed St. Joseph's would not be supplying a replacement priest for RWC.

Suspect- A Brilliant Performance

By Michael Sisco

"Suspect," starring Cher, is definitely going to the Academy Awards this year. I never realized Cher's talent until I saw this film. Cher plays a state attorney who has been assigned an almost impossible task of defending a deaf, barbaric, street bum who was apprehended at the scene of a murder. With the help of a congressman, who is also on the jury, she works to try to clear her client of the charge.

The plot thickens as she is followed in the night and an attempt is made on her life. She presses on to find more startling evidence.

Meanwhile, in the courtroom, she spars with a top notch prosecutor, bent on the death penalty or life in prison, and a judge who appears biased to say the least. Cher continues to search and finds the true identity of the murderer. I promise you --- you'll never guess who it is!

This has to be the best film I've seen this year. It's well worth the five bucks. One last bit of advice, get the biggest box of popcorn you can hold, and don't sit next to anyone jumpy.

"Fatal Attraction"

by Claudia K. Banko

Now showing at the Seekonk Showcase Cinemas, "Fatal Attraction" starring Michael Douglas and Glenn Close, is a good pick.

The story begins with a happy family, Dan Gallagher, his wife of nine years, Beth, and their five year old daughter, Ellen. Dan is a lawyer in New York City, where the family also resides. One weekend, Beth and Ellen go away to the country and leave Dan alone. Over the weekend at a meeting, Dan re-encounters a new acquaintance, Alex (a woman), a new employee at the firm. Rather than fight the pouring rain after the meeting, Dan and Alex decide to have drinks and dinner nearby. Suddenly, Alex becomes very suggestive and succeeds in drawing Dan into a passionate weekend encounter. Upon Dan's reiteration of his family situation, Alex turns suicidal. She makes a strong recovery but has a change of attitude regarding her relationship with Dan.

After constantly harassing Dan at his office, Alex begins phoning him at home. The story becomes much more complicated when Alex discovers that she is pregnant and feels that Dan should face up to his responsibilities. Alex attempts to follow Da everywhere, even to his new home in the country. She intensifies her personal vendetta, escalating Dan's outrage to a point where he threatens her life. The audience is left wondering what action she can take next, as she is a ruthless woman who will stop at nothing.

Soon Alex includes Dan's family in the attack, which has become brutal and vulgar. The final scenes of the movie are hair-raising, filled with suspense. Will anyone be the victim of Alex and her butcher knife? Dan's rage climaxes with his decision to murder Alex to end this nightmare, but will he really follow through? Meanwhile, what is wife Beth doing? An attention grabbing twist brings this film to an exciting conclusion.

If excellent acting, realistic situations, and a good story are what you like in a movie, then "Fatal Attraction" is one movie to see soon. The early scenes of the movie hint at the possibility that it is just another love triangle story. However, with the interesting turns, it is difficult to predict what will happen next.

Fourth Protocol A Review

By Michael Sisco

Now playing at the Bristol Cinema on Bradford Street is "The Fourth Protocol." The movie stars Michael Caine and Remington Steele's Pierce Brosnan.

Directed by John Mackenzie, the movie is full of on-the-edge suspense. Pierce Brosnan plays a Soviet agent with a secret mission: to assemble and activate a nuclear bomb in a small English town outside an American air-base. Michael Caine plays his English counterpart, working against the clock to find him before the bomb is detonated.

The action in the film is ingeniously layered, event upon spine tingling event, to insure an irresistible tension for the audience. The plot has enough unexpected twists to boggled even the sharpest of sleuths.

The climax of the movie occurs when Brosnan assassinates a fellow agent after making love to her. Little does he know that she, also under orders, has rigged the timing device on the bomb to detonate as soon as he makes contact with it. The countdown has begun! I leave the rest to you.

I highly recommend "The Fourth Protocol" to anyone who is tired of the predictable James Bond spy flicks. This is a real spy film, for those who love suspense.

Phone books can be purchased for $1.00 in the Dean of Students Office, Dorm 1, between 2:00 and 4:00pm Monday-Friday.

Fearing the FCC

Many local music fans thought of WUSB, the State University of New York at Stony Brook's FM station, as Long Island's hippest radio outlet. The station, after all, often played new, radical music no one else did.

But not any more. Like hundreds of college radio stations this fall, WUSB has gotten a lot blander on purpose. At some campuses, the changes have torn apart staffs, and led to rhetorical wars with station managers and college officials.

Like hundreds of other stations, WUSB will stay safe at least until the end of October, when the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) is due to respond to a broadcasters' petition to change its rules about what kinds of racy material they can allow on air.

The station's retreat to "safe" music and programming, broadcasters say, began last April, when the FCC revised its "indecent" guide lines.

The FCC's April revision bars stations from using "language or material that depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary standards for the broadcast medium, sexual or excretory activities or organs."

The result, the campus broadcasters say, was new confusion about what material was okay to use. If they guessed wrong, the FCC could cancel their licenses.

"The guidelines that used to give the appearance of being concrete are now fuzzy," said Intercollegiate Broadcasting System President Jeff Tellis.

The FCC will respond to the petitions to reconsider the indecency policy Oct. 29, said FCC attorney Ben Halprin, but, until then, broadcasters say they'll keep censoring themselves.

While advertisers and ratings battles tend to keep off-campus stations close to the mainstream anyway, the FCC's April rule change drastically altered programming at campus stations, which feature experimental shows and often celebrate the outrageous.

"College radio is at the forefront of doing things different," said WUSB station manager Norm Prusslin. "Every time you have to ask yourself 'can I do this,' that's a chilling effect. Stations are smart to be cautious, but it stifles creativity."

Almeida Pool Still At It's Top

Lance Clement

Being a Freshman at RWC, you might not recall the Almeida pool closed half of the time last year because of repairs. The upper classmen do and most of them didn't want to recommend going to anyone due to the fact that nobody knew if the pool was open or not.

"The pool has been opened and closed because of a lot of mechanical problems last year. It's now running great," said Physical Plant Assistant Director Skip Learned.

This year the pool is in full operation and wishes to any student, who attends RWC to use the pool. The hot tub is working, and the locker room, and the exercise bikes are in order, along with the steam room.

The plumbing and motors were replaced, two new filters were installed and a whole new heating system was put in.

The Almeida pool is open from 3pm weekdays and noon-6pm on weekends. Come and join in the fun.

SHORT TAKES

Schuyler points out that we are "oriented toward teaching and providing individual attention to our students." We are "one of the few four-year colleges in the nation to offer a full liberal arts curriculum in combination with a significant selection of professional / technical programs," and we are, "one of the few four-year colleges in the nation to offer undergraduate degrees in marine biology, historic preservation, and creative writing." Schuyler summarizes what the College's 'central academic strategy' should be. "Roger Williams College should remain an undergraduate, primarily residential college enrolling 2200 students of average to exceptional ability. The College's academic program should focus upon educating persons for life and work through a curriculum combining liberal arts and professional studies. As its distinctive feature, the College should emphasize its comprehensive nature and, at the same time strive to achieve and maintain national accreditation and / or recognition in at least four major areas."

PART 3: Strategic Initiatives for Implementation

The third part of the report is a listing of decisions that must be made for the colleges new strategy. Schuyler and Keller agree that the college should remain exclusively undergraduate, and that the student body should be approximately 2000-2200 students. Schuyler feels that the college should undergo a study of its programs to find which of its courses it wants to receive 'encouragement, and national recognition.' "The architecture program has already effectively reached this goal. Candidates to follow might include: engineering (some or all programs), marine sciences, legal and political studies, psychology, computer information systems, writing / communications, social and health services, theater, historic preservation, etc..." Schuyler mentions nothing about Keller's proposition to add courses such as geology, geography, etc...

One point that is made clear is that some choices have to be made. Some courses may have to be sacrificed or combined with other programs. Schuyler lays new burdens of responsibility on the administration. A Vice President for External Affairs and Development should be appointed. This new office should be charged with "fund raising and development, public relations and marketing, alumni relations, grant writing, and institutional research."

Schuyler's views of the new library project and fund raising campaign are similar to Keller's. The library should house 200,000 volumes with room for expansion. The present library should be converted to offices.

A five year capitol campaign of $40,000,000, should begin in 1988. If need be, we should borrow $500,000 from the endowment to begin. We should begin this fund raising immediately since we are in "a current robust state of U.S. economy."

Emphasis is put on student recruitment and its goals. It stresses raising the quality of those enrolling at the College, to attract more students from outside of Rhode Island and the surrounding states, to increase the number of minorities enrolled, to maintain the international enrollment at 8-10% of the student population, and "to attract a representative portion of the top secondary school graduates from schools within a forty mile radius of the campus."

Schuyler puts more emphasis on improving faculty conditions than Keller did. He specifically states that faculty salaries should be raised, and rewards granted to faculty who "exceed explicit standards of performance." He encourages outside grants, scholarly activities and research, and teaching loans to accommodate these activities. A new system of peer evaluation should be adopted and "the tendency to utilize large numbers of part time faculty in certain programs should be examined, and should be severely curtailed except where specific circumstances dictate otherwise."

Karyn Bailey — A High Achiever

by Susan Pace

Remarkable, inspiring, caring, intellectual... Those are just a few words that describe Alpha Chi President Karyn Bailey.

For those of you who are unfamiliar with Alpha Chi, it is the honor society of Roger Williams College, they represent the top 5% (academically) of the school.

Karyn spoke at the Fall 1987 Convocation for incoming Freshmen. And she will also be addressing the senior class at the May 1988 graduation, which she seems to be a trite bit nervous about. She is just so emotionally and physically involved with this school, faculty and students, that it is going to be hard to say all her good-bye's and thank you's in only 4 minutes, as she will be doing at Graduation. Although she feels very excited and honored to have the chance to take part in this extraordinary event.

To fill you in on some of Karyn's achievements...

*Took part in the honor's banquet last Spring.

*A Humanities major with an Education minor.

*Presently, student teaching at the Ranger School-Tiverton, RI.

*Governess at a home in Bristol for 2 years.

*Worked in an Electrical Engineering office.

One of her most stressful and emotional jobs would be at the Housing Session-the Supreme Court, where she had to distribute welfare for the less fortunate. She admits that this job was just too much for her, and being as sensitive as she is, she found all too often that she was taking these peoples' problems home with her. As she states "Their problems were my problems."

Karyn is also an active member of the Education Club, of which she is founder of. She is the Student Advertising director. She was also elected into the Who's Who in American College's and Universities's. She was part of the Student Mentors, which was a club that took the honor of helping new students and freshmen on there first few days on campus.

Karyn comments that her greatest success will be graduation and teaching. She finds that her most precious reward of her schooling will be being able to use her creativity and love through teaching youngsters.

Karyn did have to work for the success she has acquired, she wasn't just born that way, and she has a message she would like to bring across to anyone who may be interested: "Life is only what you make of it!"

Hawks Bring Havoc to Villanova

by William S. Kelly

The temperature in the rink brought on chills as does a day in December. Cheerleaders were on the side in skirts cheering the Hawks and freezing.

The Hawks exploded for 82 shots during the game with 55 on net to capture an opening season victory over Villanova. The defense of the Hawks was beyond a doubt incredible as the Hawks allowed only 25 shots through the entire game.

Hawks built up a 3 to 0 lead in the first period with good checking and passing. During Villanova's power play, RW Michael Cassidy scores two shorthanded goals within a period of 20 seconds. Hawks LW Paul Pantano scored the third goal, taking a pass from Cassidy and shooting through for a goal.

Villanova becomes more aggressive in the second period, but defense is still down, as Hawks get three shots on goal in the first two minutes.

Villanova finally gets the puck and start a break away towards Hawk goaltender Art Piccerelli. On a two to one situation, Villanova moves in and takes a blistering slap shot from the right side. Trying to keep his shutout in tact, the Hawks goalie makes a desperate dive and saves the puck from going in the net.

On a holding call against Villanova, the Hawks get a power play and make the best of it. With sharp passing the Hawks move it back and forth looking for the best shot. A pass to Arthur Kelley proves sufficient as he takes a slap shot from the left side which slides through the pads of the goalie and into the net, for a lead of 4 to 0.

A minute later the Hawks are called for Holding. Villanova tries to keep the puck in the Hawk's end, but it is intercepted and the Hawks breakaway once again. Taking a pass defenseman Mike Minor skates through the defense and scores on a wrist shot adding to the lead 5 to 0.

Incredibly the Hawks rush down the ice once again as forward Kevin Basette of the Hawks makes some Bobby Orr like moves on a Villanova defenseman and streaks in for a goal. With a minute remaining the Hawks continue to keep the puck in Villanova's zone and Minor of the Hawks shoots on a screen play and scores. The clock ticks away and the second period ends with the Hawks ahead 7 to 0.

Third period starts with the flashy moves of the Hawks still in their blood. With two minutes gone by, the Villanova defense was totally confused as the Hawks were taking any kind of shot they wanted.

With 16 minutes remaining on the game clock defenseman Blair McKensie shoots a rising wrist shot which is almost stopped by the goalie, but crosses the line for a goal.

The Hawks replace their goalie and with 10 minutes remaining the Villanova team gets in a lucky shot 20 feet from the net and breaks the shutout. Final score 8 to 1.

After the game I spoke with Paul Pantano about the success of the team: "We have a good team and we did everything we set out to do tonight. I feel the Hawks are going to have a very successful season and make it to the playoffs."

Salem Defense Too Strong For The Hawks to Handle

by William S. Kelly

The seats were full of students and parents as this contest against Salem took place on Parents Day. Also in the crowd were five of the women from RWC's 1984 Championship Women's Volleyball Team.

Salem won this contest 3 games to 1 with good defensive plays and serves.

The first game was won by Salem 15 to 9, but the Hawks didn't let that stop them. After being down 4 to 1 in the 2nd game, the Hawks rallied to a 7 to 4 lead from good serves from their Captain Sandy Vinton and a vital kill from Beth Bradford. The Hawks stayed ahead in this game and eventually won 15 to 9.

After the final point, the crowd of students and parents started to cheer the Hawks. A few waves were sent to the students parents in the stands. Parents always love to see their children succeed.

The Hawks offense was incredible in the 3rd game. Blocking the ball, kills, and good serves gave the Hawks a 10 to 3 lead. Salem coach Betty Bailey didn't like the way her team was playing and took a time-out.

Whatever was said during the time-out really helped their game as they cut the lead to 11 to 7 and then tied the score at 11 to 11. Salem couldn't stop the aggressive play of Salem and were defeated 15 to 13.

The aggressive play of Salem was with them in the 4th game as Salem broke out to a 9 to 3 lead. The Hawks weren't going down that easily and cut the lead in half 11 to 8. The Hawks tried their best, but in the end Salem won the game 15 to 9.

CSA

* TURKEY BASKET CONTEST *

THANKSGIVING is a day to appreciate all the people and experiences in our lives for which we are grateful.

Not everyone sits down to a scrumptious meal with a big turkey as we all do. Some families can't afford it.

Express your thanks by helping us to give at least 20 families in Bristol a turkey dinner and a happy THANKSGIVING DAY.

* ENTER THE CSA TURKEY BASKET CONTEST *

GUIDELINES

- *Turkey basket should feed a family of 6.
- *Baskets will be judged on the quality, quantity, variety and attractiveness/creativity of the food and container. The container may not be larger than 2'x2'. We recommend a frozen turkey so it will stay fresh until delivery.
- *Prize for the best turkey basket will be a "make your own sunday party".
- *Deliver your basket to the "Meeting Place" by the Dean of Students office in dorm I between 9:00 and 12:00 am, Monday, November 23 (include a list of people who worked on the basket, no more than 40 people please).
- *Judging will begin at 12:00 noon with the baskets delivered that afternoon by CSA members.
- *Enter the contest by filling out the form below and turning it into the Dean of Students office by Monday, November 16 (we need to know how many turkey baskets to expect).
