Faculty Reacts to Request for Dean's Resignation

by Sue Costello

An emergency Faculty/Senate meeting was held on Wed. Feb. 10 at 12:00 p.m. following RWC President William Rizzini's request for Dean Schiavo's resignation. The five hour meeting resulted in the airing of faculty hostility toward Rizzini's decision.

Rizzini made a brief statement then left the lecture hall, refusing to answer any questions from the 80 faculty members. He did leave open the opportunity for them to discuss the matter with him in his office.

"We have been shut off by his unwillingness to talk here," Tony Agostinelli commented.

A prolonged debate occurred between the dissatisfied group over whether or not to reconvene at Rizzini's office. The group decided to send Faculty member Joel Silverberg to ask the president to return. Rizzini arrived at Lecture Hall LH 129 but persisted in giving similar responses to several questions.

Rizzini said, "He (Schiavo) has the responsibility of over expenditures of the budget." He then proceeded to explain that the important points involved in his decision were the new library's funding and investments that are "not doing well." He mentioned that there were additional reasons, but refused to elaborate.

He added: "We have to

RWC Protests Dean Schiavo's Potential Removal

Students gathered to show concern.

by Michele Baccarella

The following points were presented to Ralph Papitto, RWC Chairman of the Board and CEO of Nortek Industries. The President and vice president

1. have failed to create an effective fiscal and budgetary process for the College,

2. have failed to disclose sufficiently the reasons of the allocation of financial resources and their expectation of revenue,

3. have made damaging and unexplained cuts in academic programs,

4. have acted without adequate collegial review to remove the Dean of the College at the start of the semester and at a time when many important academic and administrative projects require the Dean's immediate and continued attention,

5. have failed to understand or sympathize with genuine academic goals and objectives,

6. and have by these and other actions threatened to harm Roger Williams College's reputation and to endanger the College's continued accreditation with the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

After this information was publicized, Students Taking Action for Reform (S.T.A.R.) planned a meeting for 7p.m. on Feb. 10 in the Dorm III Recreation Room to enlighten the students to the situation. A crowd of approximately 200 students attended the hastily called meeting. Faculty members were supposed to attend but students were told that faculty members were tired from the afternoon's meeting. Students were informed that faculty would be present at another meeting of STAR scheduled for 5p.m. Feb. 11.

Students had many questions but representatives from STAR and the Student Senate were unable to provide those answers because of the lack of information. A student representative, who was present at the faculty senate meeting read a statement concerning the motions passed at the meeting.

Wednesday evening students were notified about an open student meeting set for 11p.m. in the gallery of the Architecture Building. It was organized by Alan Paradis, president of the RWC chapter of the American Institution for Architecture Students. Approximately 400 students gathered to hear what Gary Dennis, Arthur Cincotti, Alan Paradis and others had to report. All information that had been relayed at the STAR meeting was repeated. Students took the opportunity to ask questions about accreditation, possible faculty walk out, and the reasons behind Schiavo's impending resignation.

Student representatives attempted to quell rumors that had been circulating. Members of the Student Senate announced that a closed meeting between the senate and McKenna was tentatively scheduled for Thursday afternoon.

A meeting between five faculty members and Papitto also occurred on the same date.

Student representatives suggested that students show their support for Dean Schiavo by attending a "peaceful show of concern" at 6:30 a.m. in front of the Administration Building.

The meeting was broadcast live over WQRI, the college's radio station. The local television news media covered the event although no outside press people were allowed on campus at that time. Immediately following the meeting, Gary Dennis answered questions live on WQRI until 2a.m. Students expressed their support for the dean and eagerly offered to help. Dennis again attempted to deal with the numerous rumors.

On Thursday, Feb. 11 at 6:30 a.m., 200 students gathered to show their concern. The demonstration's purpose was to simply assert the students' right to know. There was no additional information made available. Students were told that McKenna would be the first administrator in the building. He arrived and shortly after met with student representatives.

Students moved inside the building to escape the cold and wait for McKenna and representatives. When they came out, students again moved outside to hear the results of the meeting. According to Dave Joyce, student senator, McKenna would not directly answer any questions but he did agree to a closed meeting with the Student Senate at 4p.m. in the student senate office. Channel 10 and Channel 12 news were on the scene.

Feb. 11, Faculty Senate Executive Secretary James Tackach, was asked if there was any truth in the rumor that the faculty was planning a walkout. He said that the rumor was false and

Suppressing the Need to Know

Students' and Press' Rights

Amid all the crises that have befallen this campus lately, it was good to see the students banding together to take an active part in a cause they deemed worthy. Unfortunately, there was an incident which threatened that unity.

On Thursday, Feb. 11 there were signs posted for an open meeting to take place in the Architecture gallery at 1p.m. New information from faculty members was to be disclosed. As the meeting began, Architecture Division Coordinator, Raj Saksena gave a summary of the events that had occurred the past two days. One student who also reports for The Bristol Phoenix was asked to identify himself. He complied saying that he was an RWC student and reporter. Saksena said that the meeting was closed to the press. He said the meeting was only for Architecture majors. The reporter asked if all the students at the meeting were Architecture majors. Many were not. A vote was taken to decide if non-Architecture majors should remain.

It was decided that non-Architecture were allowed to stay. The reporter for this paper requested permission to remain. She was told, "no press please."

Were the rights of these two reporters violated? Their right to know and the rights of free speech and free press? Why were there any closed meetings at all? Those signs said that new information would be disclosed by the faculty, if there was new and relevant information it should have been shared with the entire student body, not just the Architecture Division students.

All students have the right to know what decisions are being made on their behalf: and the press has the right to report on those decisions.

Heart to Heart

by Nancy A. Hood

"Being a separate self is a most glorious most lonely proposition. Loving oneself is nice but.... incomplete. Separateness is well but connection with someone outside oneself is surely sweeter. Our daily existence requires both closeness and distance. The wholeness of self, The wholeness of intimacy, writes Judith Viorst in her book Necessary Losses. It is part of the human condition to desire and seek connection with others at the same time that we need to experience ourselves as unique and distinguishable from others.

For some time I've wanted to write about intimacy and it seems especially timely around Valentine's Day when people are thinking about their love relationships or the lack thereof. There are many questions and difficulties that arise as we try to find that balance of intimacy and separateness. I see people who are lonely and questioning their worth because of the lack of love relationships in their lives, I see others grieving the loss of a relationship, or troubled by a love relationship gone wrong. I see people who out of fear of being alone are angry onto a relationship that is tearing them apart. I see people running away from relationships afraid that intimacy will swallow them whole. I see men and women who seek love through sex. I see others who can only tolerate limited closeness fearing that if they reveal too much, no one will love them. What can I say about something so complex, so intricate that can bring to our lives such intense joy and overwhelming sorrow?

We each carry with us our own experiences from our first close relationships with those who parented... who loved us enough or not enough, who either provided or didn't provide a nurturing environment for us to grow and experience ourselves and the world around us. They taught us our first lessons about intimacy. Sometimes those early relationships were so damaging that we avoid intimate relationships in our adult life, or we may find ourselves in a series of unsatisfying and even destructive relationships. But even healthy relationships require work in order to remain vital. The following are some suggestions to building and maintaining a healthy, intimate relationship.

Enjoy your shared interests but maintain your friendships and separate interests too.

Accommodate each others needs for separate time as well as time together.

Express your expectations and discuss them.

- Discuss your expectations for sexual intimacy.
- Be respectful of each others limits.
- Fight fairly- express conflict openly.
- If your relationship is not going well, consider talking to a counselor together.
- Never can intimacy be found by pretending to be anyone but yourself.

"Once the realization is accepted that even between the closest human beings infinite distances continue to exist, a wonderful living side by side can grow up, if they succeed in loving the distance between them which makes it possible for each to see the others whole against the sky." Rains Maria Rilke was not even considered at Wednesday's meeting. He was told that students wished to cooperate with faculty to back Schiavo.

Tackach agreed that communication between faculty and students was important. When informed of student actions so far, he said that students were doing the right thing and should continue showing support through student channels. He said that the only action the faculty had planned was the meeting with the five faculty members and Papitto.

Tackach said that he hoped the faculty would adopt a "business as usual" attitude today; meaning no cancellation of classes. Tackach also said that education remained the top priority.

He said, "The firing of the Dean is not going to jeopardize our accreditation. If a new library is not built in the next two years then our accreditation may be in jeopardy." He believes a new library will be built within the next two years.

Student representatives had earlier denied similar rumors and had asked students to make a special effort to attend classes in support of Dean Schiavo.

Disagreement Over Minus Grading Policy

by Jennifer Ouellette

When students received their grades during vacation, some may have wondered why they did not make the dean's list with their B+ average. There is a simple explanation: the new minus grading policy.

Since the minus has come into use, a B+ is no longer a 3.5, now it is a 3.33. To get onto the dean's list, a student must have a 3.4 average, so the B+ will no longer get the student a place on the dean's list. This also makes it more difficult to receive honors, which results from being on the dean's list consecutively.

What is being done to rectify this problem? Dean Schiavo said that he will compare the number of students on dean's list this year to those who got on it last year, to see if the number has dropped at all. Then, at the next academic council meeting, he said they would discuss the situation and make any necessary adjustments.

Dean Schiavo said he is very sympathetic to the situation, especially where the seniors are concerned. He realizes that some of them are counting on having the dean's list and honors behind them, and he wants to help in giving them that chance.

A few students agreed that the minus system has given less value to grades such as the B+, bringing down their grade point average, but for the most part, they think that their grades have been helped because of the flexibility that teachers have gained from using the minus.

Faculty members believe this to be true also. Debbi Robinson, who deals with many students at the Learning Center, thinks the policy is great because now it is easier to reward students with the higher grade when they deserve it. Instead of having to give a student a C+ when they have done work that is on the verge of a B, teachers can now give a B- to reflect the students' effort.

Dr. Mark Gould also likes having the minus option. But he also believes that no matter what the grading policy is, it really comes down to the student and what he or she wants to gain from their education.

In Memoriam

Patricia Hogan

The entire college community mourns Patricia (Seigny) Hogan, assistant to the Dean of the College, who died at home on January 22 following a brief illness. For seventeen years, she had served students, faculty, administrators, and staff in various offices, including the dean's, public relations, development, financial aid, and continuing education.

Each year Pat would coordinate the Grand Marshalls and the graduates for Commencement. And in 1985 she marched with them to receive her associate in Science degree in business administration, magna cum laude.

Pat was well-known for her extraordinary abilities, her loyalty to her colleagues, her good-humored irreverence, and, most of all, her remarkable courage. As a single parent she supported four daughters through college, and some through graduate school. She was proudest of them and their achievements.

Pat Hogan will be remembered by all at Roger Williams College. A sincere message of sympathy is extended to her daughters, Deborah Peidl, Maureen Donahue, Karen Primiano, and Patricia R Hogan. N.H.V.

New Trustees

The following have been elected to the Roger Williams College Board of Trustees: Joseph M. Cerilli, president, Providence Land Company; Donald E. Creamer, partner, Creamer Trowbridge Co.; Harry M. Crump, president and chief executive officer, American Flexible Conduit; Joseph R. Paolino, Jr., mayor of Providence; M. Anne Szostak, executive vice president, Fleet National Bank. Cerilli and Paolino are alumni, classes of 1970 and 1978 respectively. The trustees were elected to three-year terms.

make payments on these bonds."

Several faculty members asked why the blame for fiscal mismanagement was placed solely on Schiavo. The Natural Science Division's Grayson Murphy noted: "The budget process established by the people in that (the Administration) building was hastily thrown together." He continued: "I find it difficult to believe that Bart over spent $600,000 last year and they didn't know that."

Rizzini commented: "Other administrators should not have to remind Bart. I had several discussions with the dean on this matter. I like Bart but I can't let my heart rule my actions."

The faculty agreed to take a vote of confidence for Schiavo and no confidence, regarding the president and the vice president. A five member delegation was elected to present a document, stating the latter to Ralph Papitto, RWC Board of Trustees Chairman and Nortek Industries CEO. The delegation consisted of faculty members Nancy Harlow, Joel Silverberg, Loretta Shelton, John O'Connell, and Raj Saksena.

Student Senate Updates Students

The RWC Student Senate issued this update to the student body on Feb. 12

Bart Schiavo has not resigned from his position as the Dean of the college, however he is currently on a leave of absence from this position. At this time President Bill Rizzini is not looking for his resignation.

Chairman Papitto is currently forming an independent "fact finding" committee, the purpose of which is to look into the entire management of the college. This investigation is to take no longer than 90 days.

At this time an acting dean has not been appointed to replace Bart Schiavo during his leave of absence.

Roger Williams accreditation is not in danger. An accreditation team will be visiting Roger Williams College in April to examine the General Education Program and to look into the construction of a new library.

President Updates Students

by Sue Costello

President Rizzini sent a February 11 memorandum to the college community in an attempt to keep them updated on the rapidly changing campus conditions. The memo explained that Rizzini and Schiavo were discussing the situation, but the dean would only be at RWC to teach his courses.

Rizzini added, "The Board of Trustees is reviewing the entire matter. Meanwhile, all normal academic and cultural activity at the campus will continue."

Despite the president's announcement the college was not in a state of normalcy. The students met in the Architecture Building gallery and staged a sit-in for the Administration Building's lobby. Both protests occurred peacefully.

At the beginning of the Intramural Basketball League season, there was a 3-on-3 shoot-out competition. The champions of this competition were the Peaberry Swappers. Led by Captain William Franz. The team consisted of Dave Michaud, Kevin Calashan and Andy K. All the best wishes to the Swappers.

'The Changeling:' A Powerful Performance

by Melissa Juliano

It was Friday evening, January 29th at the RWC theatre barn. The spotlights focussed sharply on the grim atmosphere resembling bedlam. The lights suddenly dim, creating an aura of creepiness. There are several ways to go about critiquing a performance of such an odd nature. It appeared to be a combination of Les Miserables, Chaucer's Canterbury Tales and Shakespeare's tragedy, Macbeth. The Changeling emphasized the subjects of rape, murder and madness. The costumes were antiquated and unique. Most were made from gauze and burlap. A couple looked like court jester's outfits. If the costumes were not quite so ragged, they would have been right in tune with today's earthy styles. Although it consisted of a multi-talented cast and was a powerful performance, the repetition of painful outcries from cast members, made it hard for one to keep a steady attention span towards the middle of the play. The performance was accompanied by a myriad of musical instruments including; a violin, flute, oboe and bassoon.

The musicians wore costumes like the cast, enabling them to blend into the whole scenario. The overall performance was well done but, it was a definite "One of a kind." performance.

Providence College Performance This Wednesday

Dames of Our Lives is coming to the Providence College Theatre on Wednesday, February 17, 1988 at 8:00p.m. If it's soap operas and mysterious thrillers you enjoy, then this is the show for you. Dames of Our Lives is a one-woman, multi-character spoof of whodunits, starring Maggie McDonald and directed by Robert Mooney.

Maggie McDonald's parody, set in New York's suburban Westchester County, is populated by a nasal housewife, a policewoman, a hospital intern with a checkered past, a strange proprietress of a Beauty and Bait Shop, a twitchy motel manager named Norman Bates, and many, many more. Dames of Our Lives is a wonderful send-up of both daytime serial and the thriller, aimed generally at the cliches of speech and character of women in TV soap operas and crime dramas.

Tickets for Maggie McDonald's Dames of Our Lives are $5.00 regular admission and $3.00 students and senior citizens. Tickets may be reserved by calling (401) 865-2218. The Blackfriars Box Office is open 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. weekdays and is located off the rotunda in Harkins Hall on the campus of Providence College.

The Student Vote

Student Senate Meeting

By Melissa Juliano

On Monday February 8th at 7:00 pm, the Student Senate opened up their meeting to the public. Senate member Melissa Anderson took care of the agenda and stated the following issues, aimed at improving student life, health and safety at RWC. "Commuters will get I.D. cards shortly. There will be better security and lighting on campus. New laundry machines will go into the dorms. Recently, students have had a lot of trouble with the Bursar's office. They have been telling students that they owe money, even if they have an equal balance. The recent trouble with budget cutbacks caused the computer center to close at 4:30 but, we have managed to keep it open until 12:00 again." At this point, the public began to address the senate about issues they were concerned with. Sue Wiegand addressed the senate with the following; "The water in the shower is constantly cold in the morning. It was this way last semester too!"

Senate member Jon Cole replied, "At a recent senate meeting, Marc Capozza said that they shut the water boiler halfway down at some point during the day. That is why the water is so cold." Senate members still discussed questions among themselves. Senator Ted Gosling asked about the possibility of a banking machine in the student union. "The school said that the cost would be too high," senate member Jennifer Malouf retorted. Melissa Anderson mentioned that students should be more aware of what the school is spending money on. "The senate should form a committee to find out why money is not spent on areas where students need it!" Senator Haidee Kupecz believes that students should be able to use computers whenever they want, especially when they pay a fee for their own programs. Haidee also feels that the senate should help clubs financially. "The disabled students committee needs more money for a future event, although we are not an official club yet." Dan Slater, another senate member said, "We cannot give clubs any money until we go through their record books."

Melissa Anderson then came into the discussion to say, "We can only do the best that we can for each club. Clubs must submit something to us stating just what they need. Then we will decide all at once who will get what." Nick, a member of the audience asked if anything had been done about extending health center hours and having an overnight infirmary. "My freshman year, I was confined to Dorm II with very contagious mono because there was no overnight infirmary!" Jon Cole replied, "We are trying to work on extended health service hours. This will include some overnight hours, mainly to help out exchange students."

Melissa Anderson mentioned that the senate made an effort to see about getting refunds for meals if you do not attend each one. Steven Maillet, a member of the audience said, "I have worked in college cafes before. This whole meal plan idea is a total rip-off." As the senate began to adjourn the meeting, senator Robyn Clark left an important message for students at RWC. "We are not looking for just power! We want to work for you. We need your input. The senate alone cannot do it. That is why we folded-up last year. A lot of people bitch and complain but want to do absolutely nothing about it!"

This semester, the student senate will be working closely with the S.T.A.R. Committee. All of the issues discussed at this open senate meeting will be worked on and discussed more at their upcoming meetings.

While both teams were warming up, the stands began to fill with fans hoping for an exciting february 6 game in the RWC Gym. The Hawks looked like they had victory in their eyes, but it was not to be. At the end of the game the visiting fans were not disappointed as Salve Regina defeated RWC 75-73, a crushing defeat for the Hawks.

As usual, Vinnie Godwin came out to play leading the Hawks with 20 points, 5 assists, three 3-pointers, and 5 for five at the free throw line. Pulling down the rebounds for the Hawks was 6 foot 5 Lee Marelli with 5.

Salve Regina won the tip and the game was under way. With poor shooting, the Hawks fell to a 13-2 deficit. Coach Dwight Datcher wasn't happy and called a time-out. Picking away at the lead the Hawks scored three straight baskets, cutting the lead to 5 points.

With 7:23 left in the first half Salve Regina increased their lead to 10. Making a steal, Vinnie Godwin went in for the layup cutting the lead to 8. With 3:30 remaining in the half Godwin cut to the basket and scored, cutting the lead to 2. For the first time in the game RWC went ahead by a point

Outside the wind was brisk as freezing temperatures moved into Rhode Island. Inside the heat began to rise as RWC's Woman's Basketball team confronted Salve Regina, during a home game on february 6.

Salve Regina came out with a victory 74-61. In this losing cause, guard Sandy Vinton led the Hawks scoring with 18 points and knocking in two three-point field goals. The Hawks shooting percentage for the game was 43%.

After five minutes of play Salve Regina was leading 10 to 6. Two fouls were committed by Salve Regina and the Hawks were back in the game.

With a four-point lead an intentional foul was called against Regina. Vinton made both free-throws and the score stood at 18 to 17 Regina.

Getting the ball back the Hawks scored taking a one-point lead.

The lead diminished when the Hawks defense turned off and Regina streaked to a lead of seven.

The first half score stood at 37 to 27 in favor of Salve Regina. Leading scorer for the Hawks was Captain Sandy Vinton, who produced nine points.

At the start of the second, half harsh defense and good shooting from the Hawks reduces Regina's lead to seven.

Under the boards Regina's center Tracy Giroux was damaging the Hawks spirit as Regina led 66 to 50.

Four minutes remaining and the Hawks go on a spurge getting it down to 10, but they could go no further as Regina went on to win 74 to 61.

overcame the Hawks, taking a 13-point lead.

With 6:28 remaining in the game the Hawks showed Salve Regina they were not going to quit, by scoring 11 of the next 13 points. A three-minute delay occurred when the scoring boards weren't working properly; they were fixed and the game continued.

Fans in the stands were biting their nails as Salve Regina scored with 21 seconds remaining to take a 2-point lead, 75-

73. Datcher called a time-out to set up the last play. Godwin brought it down court and with the clock ticking away passed it, but the ball was knocked out by Salve Regina.

With three seconds remaining Severson went in for a desperation shot which hit the rim and bounced out. Though the Hawks lost, they weren't defeated because it was a well-played game down to the final seconds.
