Dunfey appointed to new post Reasons for appointment unclear

By Kary Andrews
Managing Editor

William R. Dunfey, RWC director of admissions, has been appointed to assistant to the vice president for academic affairs for enrollment planning.

The appointment, announced in August, according to Malcolm Forbes, vice president for academic affairs, was made to take advantage of Dunfey's talents in other areas, such as student retention.

However, some faculty see the appointment as an attempt to force Dunfey out because of differences between him and President Natale Sicuro leaving some to question the implications of the appointment. Dunfey declined to comment on any matter relating to his new position.

"In my opinion Mr. Dunfey is being pushed out because of a dispute with the president over a quality versus quantity issue," Dr. Mel Topf, former member of the Enrollment Planning Committee, College Planning Committee and professor of humanities, said. "The president does not have a reputation of treating well those who disagree with him, and Mr. Dunfey has been known to do that. In light of that, the notion that Dunfey has gotten a promotion is absurd. The promotion is a real one, but only as a step in his departure," Topf added.

When asked if he thought the change of position for Dunfey was strange at a time when the enrollment numbers at RWC are at record highs under Dunfey's direction,

Dr. James Tackach, secretary of the now defunct faculty senate and school of humanities faculty member, said, "It is not necessarily strange, but there is nothing in the Plan for the 90s that suggests that the admissions office would be revamped. That they would do so without including it in the plan adds to my suspicions that it is a way to get Mr. Dunfey to look for a new job." Tackach added that he had not spoken to Dunfey about the matter.

According to Forbes, although the enrollment numbers have increased under Dunfey's direction from 1850 (full-time day students) in 1986 to 2100 this year, the number of applications was down this year from 3556 in 1989 to

Faculty Members Assume Roles As Deans

By Vadim, Staff Writer

The six faculty members began their new positions as academic deans this July. In the following interviews they expressed their feelings toward their new positions and their plans for the future.

Mark Gould is the science and mathematics dean who came to RWC in 1973 as a faculty member in biology and marine biology.

Dean Gould has represented the science and mathematics departments in and out of the school as well as doing his own research, like surveying the amount of fresh water throughout the state.

Gould believes the future looks good for undergraduate majors in mathematics and science. "Mathematics is the universal language for the science," said Gould who is anxiously awaiting the marine biology center on-the-water project which is underway.

John Stout, a 23 year RWC veteran, is both dean of continuing education and dean of social science.

Although the continuing education department does its own recruiting, Stout acts on each application himself. The evening program now has 1000 students, and the Open Program ( External Degree Program) has 600 students.

Stout has also started a program which enables students to get credit for jobs or life experiences. "The future of RWC looks positive because we've been able to learn how to build on our strengths. We're in a phase of maturity as a college which will reflect on our image, programs and students."

Marilynn Mair, dean of the school of fine and performing arts, came to RWC in 1980 as a part-time music instructor. As dean, she is responsible for problem solving within the school of fine arts and in the college structure as it involves the school of fine and performing arts.

Mair said, "The school of fine and performing arts is an exciting transitional phase as we develop into a school with facilities and programs to fully serve the creative needs of our students."

The school of humanities' dean is Bob Blackburn who is in his 23rd year here at RWC. Dean Blackburn came to RWC in 1968 as an instructor in philosophy.

In 1979, he became division coordinator which enabled him to become a full-time faculty member, teaching 75 percent of the time, and spending the other 25 percent on administrative work.

Now, as dean, his role has changed to mostly administrative work. However, there is nothing more enjoyable to Blackburn than teaching.

Blackburn expressed encouragement over RWC's progress. "RWC was a great place for teaching 22 years ago, and for different reasons, it's still a great

Library Construction Progresses quickly

By Aimee Godbout,

Except for the tower, the outside work is finished, and the interior construction has begun, said Carol DiPrete, dean of academic services.

According to DiPrete, they are, "moving right along," and are scheduled to finish in December of this year, "on time."

With the help of professional movers, the library move will take eight working days to complete. "And although it takes time to get settled, we will be ready to go by the start of school (second semester)," she said.

Along with a steady increase of volumes, there will be a number of new services and amenities available in the new library. Said DiPrete, "The new library will be fully automated with an on-line catalog. No more card catalog."

There will also be an expanded curriculum center for the education students and seven group study rooms, including one late-night study room. This late-night, unsupervised study room is what DiPrete is most concerned about.

Said DiPrete, "We are very enthusiastic to give students this opportunity, and we hope that they take the responsibility to treat it well- as their place."

"The number of applications makes a difference but so does quality. I think Dunfey's new position will make a difference because with another person in admissions and Dunfey in retention we'll address the issues necessary to attack our enrollment," Forbes said.

Keeping up with enrollment is presently a nation-wide problem, according to Dunfey.

"In Northeast high schools there has been a steady decline in graduates affecting every type of institution," Dunfey said. Although this is the case, under Dunfey's direction there has been a 13 percent increase in full-time day students enrolled at RWC over the past four years.

"I don't think there is another college in New England that has had that kind of steady growth both qualitatively and quantitatively. This is something that the people in my office can be really proud of," Dunfey said.

Topf sees Dunfey's promotion as fitting a particular arrangement organizations make when trying to push a person out. "In organizations a common arrangement to make with people who are going to get pushed out is to balance it with an award, like a promotion. This situation fits that pattern," Topf said.

Asked if Dunfey has expressed any concern over his new position, Forbes said, "I don't think he feels he'll be able to do anything with it until a new person comes on board, so at this point it is just a title."

When Forbes was confronted with rumors that this position was created in order to avoid the controversy that would have resulted from a direct dismissal of Dunfey, he replied, "I would say to them, 'Why are you dreaming up these rumors?' If this were true why would we make an appointment like this instead of just asking him to leave? I think a lot of people are looking for machinations of the administration."

Tackach said, "He (Dunfey) is the best administrator the school has. I think my colleagues would agree that the quality of the students in the last five years has increased substantially. I think Mr. Dunfey and his staff are primarily responsible for that. I think he is a real professional, and it would be a great loss if he left the college."

This room will contain two TV/video cameras connected to the guard shack, "in case something happens or someone gets sick," said DiPrete.

In the new library, all the periodicals will be together, and everything will be logically organized and easy to find, DePrete said.

But perhaps the most exciting aspect of the new library is that it will be fully air-conditioned! DiPrete said, "This is just one of the ways in which the new library will have a nicer atmosphere and a more comfortable atmosphere to work in."

"Last year, circulation increased 35%. This is an indicator that more students are using the library, and it's only fair that they have a nice place to go," said DiPrete.

Architecture students, in particular, might be interested to know that the architecture library will remain in the architecture building.

Students Benefit From New ATM

By Aimee Godbout,

How many Friday nights have you piled into a car with your friends looking forward to dinner, a movie, or dancing and then realized that you spent your last $5 on lunch at the snack bar?

Now what? You're heading out with your friends with nothing but a wallet full of lint. Fear sets in as you review your options. You could: scrape up all the quarters you've put aside for laundry money, beg your pals for a loan, or stay behind, watch reruns of Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous and curse yourself for not having bought a lottery ticket instead of a burger and fries.

But wait! You can get "Cash to go" by using the new automatic teller machine (ATM) in the Union. Relief. Your night is saved!

Perhaps you've never experienced this scenario, but cash flow has always been a problem for college students, especially for freshmen and other students without cars.

The idea of an on-campus ATM has been circulating in recent years, and with its long-awaited arrival came a ribbon-cutting ceremony to kick it off. Among those in attendance were President Sicuro, Herb L. Miller, president of Eastland Bank, Bill O'Connell, director of student and auxiliary activities, Bill Mecca, president of the senior class, and Justin Reyher, president of the student senate.

With the advent of this ATM, students will be able to use a Yankee24, CIRRUS, Cashstream, Discover, MasterCard or American Express card to obtain quick, convenient cash virtually around the clock and close to home.

However, if you're not using an Eastland Bank card, you will be charged $.75 for each withdrawal, and an additional $.75 to check your account balance. Beware! Those additional fees can really add up.

Parking issue still a problem

By Dolores DelPadre,
Features Editor

Who would ever imagine that the first few days of school would be spent waiting in one endless line after the other? Not me. However, if you need to register, get mail box keys, pay your balance or receive your confirmation slip, don't plan on doing anything for the next four or five hours.

There was one particular line that looked like it would never end. You know which one I'm talking about, right outside the guard shack. Yeah, that's the one, the dreaded parking sticker line.

Many of the upperclassmen thought the security department would have eliminated the line this school year, due to the letter students received in mid August by Edward T. Shaw, director of security and

"If we paid our money for the parking sticker, why can't security take the time to mail it back to us?"--Paul Fanizzi, Junior safety. The letter requested the upperclassmen planning to park on campus fill out a vehicle registration card, policy contract and include $5 (the fee to park on campus). However, this did not terminate the aggravation of waiting in line. "We mailed out the information to expedite the process," Shaw said. "If we didn't do that the lines would be much longer."

"I waited in line for an hour and fifteen minutes," Paul Fanizzi, a junior, said. "If we paid our money for the parking sticker, why can't security take the time to mail it back to us?"

Shaw described the mailing procedure as a "clearing process." When the student returns the registration and policy contract, it's assuring the upperclassmen that no one ineligible intrudes on their parking privilege, Shaw said. "It's a fair process."

He said, "It takes time to receive the proper information on each student." Shaw and the security department can't mail back the stickers because, "We've had many adjustments in the Student Life Office. Some students have changed their campus address or decided not to take a car on campus, therefore their status has changed."

Aaron Perkins, a fifth year architecture student, decided to beat the system and park his car at North Campus for the first week until things settled down. In hopes of creating a new system in the years to come, Shaw said, "I may be able to work with the Parking Committee in conjunction with the Student Life Office establishing the residence of the student (resident vs. See Parking, Page 12

Getting ready for the "real world"

By Michele Baccarella
Contributing Editor

As most of us in the Class of 1991 enter our last year, we can look back and try to count all the times we were told by parents, faculty and employers that we had it easy, and just wait 'til we had to go out into the real world.

What I want to know is where exactly have we been for the past four years? I don't know about the rest of you, but I think I'm living in the "real world."

They say we're spoiled and sympathize sarcastically at how rough we have it since we just go to school.

Well I don't know about the rest of you, but most of the students I know do just a little bit more than go to school.

I know students who go to school and work at night or on weekends, which kind of kills the "all you kids know how to do is party" theory that is popular at holiday family gatherings.

Another one of my favorites is, in the "real world" you don't get any summer vacation.

I wonder how many of us spent this past summer holed up in some island paradise chugging pina colodas.

An informal poll found us lazy college kids slaving behind 90 degree grills on the Cape, or trying to get a foot in the door in a profession of our choice so that when May rolls around we may actually be doing something remotely related to what our degree says we can do.

Many times I think this "real world" will be easier, and having had a taste of it, I know it is.

Of course you have worries and concerns, but usually they're all job-related. In this "real world" you don't worry simultaneously about how you're going to read enough so that you can participate in a class discussion, write a literature paper on something you don't know too much about and wonder how in the world you're going to study for a test in a subject that may as well be Greek.

But that's not all. Then you try to act on the well-intentioned advice of your high school guidance counselor who advocated getting involved in your college.

I thought senior year was supposed to be easy. I wasn't supposed to be spending extended blocks of time with my nose glued to a history book. I was supposed to be frequenting bars and flaunting my new senior legal status. All the seniors I knew last year did. Or so I thought.

The beginning of this year gave a new meaning to the term contradiction.

Was it going to be a year to strive for a 4.0 and finish off working as hard as I started or to kick back and reward myself for constant diligence and hard work. The first few days of classes provided more than a few examples of what kind of time would be required pretty much preventing me from becoming a regular at Gillary's.

The first Biology class of the year was a laugh. It was filled with seniors who somehow hoped the requirement might have vanished since we were freshmen.

And freshmen are probably the ones who bars were originally intended for, since hours of reading (already) will do a fine job of keeping a safe majority of upperclassmen from frequenting them, at least on weeknights.

There is the feeling of confidence as seniors walk around campus knowing where they are going and no longer intimidated by the cafeteria or from answering in class.

But, it's a strange feeling to be beginning the end.

Peterson to retire

By Susan Cicchino,
Staff Writer

Roger Williams College's Bursar, Raymond Peterson, will be retiring after ten years on our campus. As soon as a replacement is found, said Peterson, he will be notified as to when his retirement becomes effective.

Peterson, whose job deals with all aspects of students' accounts, said his plans for the future are "indefinite". He does, however, plan to stay active in the business world, he said.

Peterson, who is of retirement age, said his decision to retire was made relatively suddenly. He also said that he will miss all of the people, both the students and personnel. Peterson said he has become familiar with just about everyone on campus, from the president to the physical plant people.

Before working at RWC, Peterson said, he spent 30 years as a financial officer for the Allendale Insurance Company in Johnston, R. I. Peterson, born and raised in Rhode Island, said he plans to stay in the vicinity with his wife of 40 years, Nancy Cameron Peterson.

Peterson, who graduated from Bryant college with a degree in Accounting and was a pilot/bomber during World War II, said he found his job as Bursar both "challenging and enjoyable".

He also said that he was "fortunate" that the students have been so cooperative.

Printing The Police Report: Our Constitutional Right

In the last issue of last semester The Messenger ran a police log which included the names of Roger Williams students who were arrested for different violations. The reports were acquired directly from the Bristol Police Department.

The response was one of the few times when students were angry enough to take a stand.

Not only did we receive plenty of verbal criticism - mostly from students named in the report - but someone was also angry enough to steal about 300 copies of the paper, costing us approximately $250.

The person disposed of them in the men's restroom of the classroom building shortly after they were distributed.

We realize that in publishing the report for the first time we overlooked certain concerns such as adopting a policy of either naming all the students arrested or none and of not following up the report with the results of the court appearances which may have eliminated the charges altogether.

In our defense we want to say that we only published the names which appeared in the report from the Bristol Police Department verbatim. We did not follow up the police report with district court results because of a time constraint (it was our last issue of the semester).

We can understand some of the arguments for not publishing the names in the police report, such as, the possibility that faculty and friends may allow their judgements to be clouded by what they've read, therefore allowing them to prejudge a student. We also realized a police log would attract more attention on a small college campus, such as ours, rather than when it appears in local papers (which it does).

However, The Messenger reserves its right to publish the police report intact.

We are protected under the constitutional rights we are awarded as citizens of the United States of America.

You make the choice to break a law and with that choice you relinquish your anonymity.

In this issue on page 10, we will resume printing the police report.

We welcome your comments in written form and promise to share any criticisms or praise of the decision in the next issue.

Your response to this will influence the decision we will make on establishing specific policy regarding district court appearances and publishing the names of those arrested.

Letter From The Editor

This is it everybody, the first Messenger under my managing editor status. Its been interesting to say the very least. I like to joke that without my red-line to Michele I would never have learned everything I needed to in order to get this first issue out. But all joking aside, I would like to thank Michele publically for all the pointers and support she has given me for this issue. I had a lot to learn, and she was the perfect person to teach me.

I would also like to thank The Messenger staff, and editors (Aimee, Neil, Erica, Dolores, and Meghan) for putting up with my scatterbrained attitude and disorganization over this issue.

I am very excited about my new position at The Messenger and would appreciate any feedback all of you readers out there can give me about possible improvements that we could make at the newspaper, and I welcome any criticisms you might have. I would like to remind everyone that this is a newspaper for students and run by students. We want to gear this newspaper to you and the only way we can do that is to hear from you about your concerns, your interests and what's going on out there.

The Messenger is also pleased to announce the acquisition of some new computer equipment that will allow us to improve design and hopefully the quality of our newspaper. Please bear with us through this transitional period of experimentation and new leadership. Thankyou, and have a great semester.

Laurel Speer Opens Alive! Arts Series

by Gretchen A. Reilly
Staff Writer

Author Laurel Speer read from her three latest poetry books when she visited RWC last Tuesday to open the 1990-1991 Alive! Arts series.

Throughout the hour, sponsored by the RWC Cultural Affairs Committee, Speer's poetry elicited occasional laughter. Speer said she was particularly pleased to be reading from "Cold Egg," her latest book, for the first time.

A poem entitled "Windows and Snails" was written about her grandmother and "I Never Had a Mother" was inspired by Emily Dickinson, Speer said.

Speer said her poems came mostly from real life experiences, but she said she also looks to history to find subjects such as Charles Lindbergh and Ludwig Beethoven, just two historical personalities which turned up in her poetry.

Speer signed copies of her books "Second Thought Over Bourget," "Very Frightened Men" and "Cold Egg."

Movie Review

Julia Roberts stars with Kiefer Sutherland in "Flatliners."

Flatliners (R)

Five medical students explore the fringes of death: they clinically die and then are revived to tell about their experiences. This stylish and original horror film offers some bizarre entertainment. But the payoff - the visions of afterlife - is a letdown. Inane dialogue and some cliches conclude the film in typical Hollywood fashion. Kiefer Sutherland stars as a student Dr. Frankenstein. Julia Roberts, Kevin Bacon and William Baldwin play his partners.

Plan for the 90s brings new athletic field to RWC

by Neil Nachbar
Sports Editor

Last spring, President Sicuro announced the school's Plan for the 90s which included several new buildings and facilities.

The first new addition of the decade is an athletic field, located behind the Paolino Recreation Center.

The field will serve as the home of the soccer, lacrosse, rugby, baseball and softball teams, as well as intramurals. Others can sign up to reserve time on the field in the athletic office.

Prior to this year, the baseball team played their home games at Bristol High School, and the softball team played at Colt State Park. Now the students will have the opportunity to hear the crack of the bat, or rather, the twang of aluminum, right on campus. The softball team will be capable of playing night games thanks to six light towers surrounding the field.

The field took a year of planning and construction. "We didn't envision the project being this complex because of the soil content," explained Matt White, director of the physical plant.

RWC took soil samples to Dr. Richard Skogley, head of turf management at URI. Dr. Skogley came up with a soil that would provide adequate drainage.

"We wanted the field in playing condition two hours after it rains, not two weeks later like it used to be," White said.

Steve Terrian, construction project manager at the physical plant, drew the plans for the field and headed a team that devised the irrigation system.

Drainage pipes were placed every 50 feet. Water used to keep the soil moist on dry days comes from two 5,000 gallon tanks next to the recreation center. "We decided to use the water storage tanks instead of the town's water," said Terrian.

The landscaping was done by DaPontes Landscaping Services of Bristol. The same company is responsible for the maintenance, a job the school may assume in the future, said White.

A track measuring a little more than a quarter of a mile surrounds the field. The track and infields are made of stone-dust.

Two things have been noticeably absent from the field: a scoreboard and bleachers.

A scoreboard will be hooked up soon that will be used by all of the teams using the field.

Bleachers seating 200-250 people have been expected. However, Ray Cordiero, equipment and building manager, claims the bleachers are the responsibility of the physical plant. The physical plant disagrees with this, saying the responsibility belongs to the athletic department. In the meantime, pull up a patch of grass and enjoy the game.

Another new attraction to the campus is a beach volleyball court. Located between the recreation center and the tennis courts, it has already become a popular addition to the school. During some hours, students have been seen waiting their turn to play. Others have been seen playing well into the night.

The volleyball court was originally the idea of Joel Dearing, former RWC athletic director. Intramural beach volleyball will be introduced next week. Anyone can reserve court time in the same manner as the field or the gym.

Other new additions to the athletic department include a portable batting cage and an exercise bicycle for the exercise room.

Sophomore Josh Gorton attempts to hit ball on RWC's new beach volleyball court.

The women's volleyball team officially opened their 1990 season Saturday, Sept. 15, with their annual RWC Invitational Tournament.

The Hawks are led by first year head coach Kevin Lynch, and first year assistant coach Mark Mastin. Lynch, who has served as the team's assistant coach the past two years, becomes the Hawks' third different head coach in the past three seasons.

A 1979 graduate of Springfield College, Lynch offers a level of guidance and intensity to the coaching position that was lacking last year. "Kevin points out our mistakes and tells us how to correct them," says co-captain Maureen Gradley.

Mastin, a junior from Coventry, Rhode Island, is also the captain of the men's volleyball team. The 20 year old setter should work well with Lynch, who has helped coach the men's program for the past few years.

Participating in the tournament were Manhattenville, Wentworth Institute, Vassar, Rhode Island College and Eastern Nazarene College. The tournament was round-robin with a best out of three games format.

The Hawks first opponent of the day was Manhattenville. RWC was slow getting out of the blocks, 4-12. Manhattenville played well enough the rest of the game to win, 15-10. Keeping the pressure on in the second game, Manhattenville jumped out to a 10-5 lead. The Hawks battled back to tie the score at 12-12. However, Manhattenville scored the last three points to take the match.

RWC's next opponent was Wentworth. Despite committing several service errors, the Hawks won convincingly 15-1, 15-1.

Vassar, a more formidable opponent, was next in line. RWC had trouble gaining any momentum and continued to commit errors. Vassar took the first game 15-7. The Hawks held a 7-3 edge in the second game, but Vassar went on a 12-1 run to close out the match.

The fourth match of the day, against Rhode Island College, was by far the most exciting. The Hawks jumped out to a 7-0 lead, forcing RIC to call a timeout. RIC tried to climb back into the game, but the Hawks were playing their best volleyball of the day. RWC won the opening game 15-7.

The start of the second game made the previous performance look like a fluke. RIC pulled out to a quick 8-1 lead. But the Hawks regained their composure, and overtook RIC 10-9. The roller-coaster ride was far from over. RIC captured five of the next six points, putting the Hawks in a game point situation, 14-11. Just when it looked like the match was headed for a third and deciding game, Maureen Gradley register-

Kemmy joins RWC athletic department

by Neil Nachbar
Sports Editor

RWC's athletic department has seen some new faces in recent years: a full-time trainer, a night building manager, an assistant athletic director, and several coaches.

The newest member of this administrative staff is David Kemmy. The Bristol resident replaces Marcus Jannitto as head of intramurals and recreation, and replaces Cindy McKenzie as Sports Information Director.

"I asked (Jannitto) to do some things in athletics that he was unwilling to do, so we both agreed he should move on," says Athletic Director Dwight Datcher. Others refused to comment on Jannitto's release.

Kemmy has served as the Sports Information Director at Rhode Island College for the past seven years. He has also been the head men's soccer coach at RIC the past three seasons.

For the past five seasons Kemmy has coached the Bristol High School wrestling team. In that stint he compiled a 66-23-3 record. Kemmy has also been associated with the sport on a national level. Since 1986 he's served as State Chairman for USA Wrestling in Rhode Island, and has been a Junior Olympic National Team Coach. Kemmy is a member of the National Soccer and Wrestling Coaches Association.

"I want to get the word out on the athletes on a daily and weekly basis," says Kemmy. "I plan to circulate a weekly newsletter that will include the athlete of the week and the week's highlights."

Kemmy's approach to sports information is a refreshing change. In the past, most students have been unaware of the latest sports news, and many have complained about the athletic department's lack of game promotion. Kemmy's newsletter was successful at RIC. "Promotion is something I have no fear of tackling," says Kemmy.

Co-ed beach volleyball and flag football will be the first two intramural sports of the year. "I would like to see a broader base participation in intramural sports," says Kemmy. Intramural sports have been dominated by males in the past, but Kemmy plans to put more emphasis on females.

Home run and free throw contests are a couple of examples of activities that Kemmy has planned for later this year. "I want to plan as many things for the students as possible," says Kemmy.

It took the RWC soccer team 17 games last year before they claimed three victories. This year the Hawks won three games in their first four tries. One reason for the turn around is first year head coach Jim Cook.

The Bristol native brings to RWC over 20 years of coaching experience. In 1973 Cook started the varsity soccer program at Tiverton High School, where his teams won several Rhode Island State Championships. In 1989 Cook moved from Tiverton to Bishop Connolly High School in Fall River, Mass. The URI graduate has an overall coaching record of 155-100-62 (.620). Cook was awarded for his achievements in 1989 when he was inducted into the Rhode Island Soccer Coaches Association Hall of Fame.

Cook is joined by assistant coach Patrick McGuirl, a former goalkeeper at Rhode Island College. McGuirl has worked closely with the RWC goalies who didn't allow any goals during regulation of the first four games.

Cook's coaching philosophy includes having a strong defense, a welcome change from last year's team which didn't register a shut-out until the eighteenth game of the season.

The degree of play at the college level has been a noticeable change from high school in Cook's eyes. "I can do more with the kids because their skills are better," said Cook. "The intensity is much higher."

Cook would like to see the team improve offensively. "We're not creating enough scoring opportunities," said Cook. The Hawks have only scored six goals in the first five games.

On Sept. 8, the soccer team opened their season against Curry College on RWC's brand new athletic field.

Two minutes into the second half David Carlino scored on a pass through two defenders by Colin Hynes. Strong defense by sweeper Scott Rivoira and John Donzella, as well as three superb saves by goalie Michael Street, secured the 1-0 victory.

Southeastern Mass. Univ. came into town three days later. After 90 minutes of regulation, the two teams were locked in a scoreless tie, despite several good shot opportunities by SMU. Five minutes into the first overtime, SMU added an insurance goal in the second overtime, giving SMU the 2-0 win.

On Sept. 13, captain Matt Carroll led the way against Framingham State College. Carroll scored one goal and assisted on two others in the 3-0 shutout. Giovanni Mercia and Craig Rogers accounted for the other two goals. Tom Arcari won his first game in net for the Hawks.

The Hawks' defense continued to shine in their next game against Eastern Nazarene College on Sept. 15. RWC's lone goal came on a slicing header by defenseman Scott Rivoira. The goal was set by a corner kick from Carroll. The point was enough to preserve See Soccer, Page 10

Riders against vandalism

By Sharon Orser,
Contributing Writer

It has come to our attention that some students at RWC have a disrespect for property, even worse, private property.

This past weekend a structure used as an obstacle for horse jumping competitions was destroyed on the property belonging to Ferrycliffe Farm.

We as a team who practice and ride out of Ferrycliffe Farm felt that the general community of RWC should be aware of this fact. It seems every year around this time something goes "wrong" at the farm. Last year it was two blow up bear bottles that were stolen, and in the past, other jumps have been damaged.

Just so everyone is clear on the facts- the area around the barn and the fields associated with it down to the water is private property. Those who see fit to trespass will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

ed a kill that awoke the fans and led RIC to use a timeout. With the momentum back on their side, the Hawks escaped several game points, and won 17-15.

"As the day progressed the passing and serving improved," said Lynch. "The team played very well."

The final match of the tourney was against Eastern Nazarene College. ENC came into the match undefeated, and their dominance showed as they shut the Hawks out in the opening game. RWC didn't fair much better in the second game, losing 15-4.

ENC finished 5-0, Vassar 4-1, Manhattenville, RWC, and RIC were 2-3, and Wentworth was 0-5. Gradley was named to the all-tournament team.

Faculty Return From Sabbatical Refreshed

Ever wonder where the faculty go and what they do on their sabbatical? Possibly a trip to central Indiana for some late-night cow-tipping or a Buddhist meditation ceremony in the upper Himalayans. Maybe an underwater expedition to the Marina trench or crawling into a dark stove for weeks searching the depths of the soul. Others think that the faculty spend their time cramped up in a dingy corner of a musty old library.

The faculty that went on sabbatical last semester did some exotic traveling, but all of them were involved with in-depth research in their field.

Dr. Richard Potter, American studies instructor, spent the sabbatical researching a new study abroad course which will be offered in the Spring of '91. Dr. Potter spent time researching the Southwest and then traveled to Santa

--Will Ayton, School of Fine Arts

Fe, NM to collect data and plan the trip. He also emphasized the importance of the trip abroad in terms of students getting "exposure to other cultures."

Will Ayton, music area coordinator, felt the sabbatical helped him "renew energy for teaching." Ayton used his semester to finish the classroom portion of his doctorate in music at the University of Boston in Boston, Mass. "It's good being a full time student again, it helps me to be a better teacher," claimed Ayton. He also expressed a deeper appreciation for education and claimed that he will "demand more" from his students now.

Dr. George Ficorilli, a natural science instructor, had a very specific purpose in "updating the evolution course." Dr. Ficorilli spent time researching in local libraries and integrated the newest research done in evolution into the evolution course (BIO 225) which will be offered in the Spring of '91.

If you had been in the old country of England or traveling in Europe you might have crossed paths with Dr. Michael Wright, instructor of philosophy. Dr. Wright studied moral philosophy and problems with the concept of self at Cambridge University in Cambridge, England. He went to Cambridge as a visiting student in the graduate program. Wright also expressed that the new studies helped him attain a deeper level of understanding of some moral questions which will "spill over into classes." Wright brought his family to Europe and was pleased that his wife and children had the cultural experience.

Dr. Charles Trimbach, instructor of psychology, went on sabbatical the fall semester of '89, and studied a method of psychology which he would design a course around. Dr. Trimbach was researching Phenomenological Psychology (study of other's individual experiences) in hopes of offering an entire course devoted to the subject next semester. Dr. Trimbach was also concerned with the normal six month sabbatical leave which he feels is an insufficient amount of time for in-depth research.

Twenty-three-year veteran of the school, John W. Stout, open division instructor, dean of continuing education and dean of social sciences, spent his time researching new developments in city management. Stout traveled to New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia to study demonstration projects in city management for further research on the topic. He claimed that only a few colleges in the country offer a city management course which has been running at this college for several years.

Josh Stein, who was unavailable for an interview was researching the relationship of the British government with the Jews of England and the Jews in Europe under Nazi control.

All the instructors expressed some sign of rejuvenation from their sabbatical, and most wished they had a longer leave.

Student Senate will require monthly reports from clubs

By Michele Baccarella
Contributing Editor

Starting next month, all Senate clubs and organizations will be required to submit monthly, oral or written reports to the Senate regarding their activities.

The motion made by student senator Tom Fear was passed at last Monday's Student Senate meeting.

"It's to let the Senate know what the clubs are doing," Fear said, adding that he made the suggestion after hearing a member of a club complain that a Senate-funded club was not doing anything. This contradicted what Fear said another member of the same club had told him.

Clubs and organizations will receive a letter sometime within the next month clearly explaining what will be expected of them, Fear said. Clubs that do not comply will have their funds frozen until they do. The reports would include information about club activities or fundraisers, Fear said.

Another motion which would appoint each of the 15 senators to a certain number of clubs, also passed unanimously.

Each senator will serve as a mentor, supporter and liaison to the club in the next few weeks. Clubs will be notified as to who their Senate liaison will be.

Senate office hours will be Monday to Friday from noon to 3 pm. Schedules of which senators will have which office hours will be posted prominently around campus.

Students whose parking appeals went unhealed last year will have another opportunity to appeal their tickets.

Snack bar receives face-lift

By Heather Gould,
Staff Writer

What was happening at Roger Williams while you were enjoying your summer break?

Returning students didn't have to ask that question for very long. Renovations in the snack bar and the bookstore were hard to miss for those familiar with the campus.

The area was transformed to one with a much brighter, more open feeling. Students who both worked and socialized in the old snack bar seemed pleased and surprised with the changes.

That is the type of reaction William O'Connell, director of auxiliary and student activities, was hoping for. "The college as a community was not satisfied with the presentation before," O'Connell said.

An informal poll of the students, faculty, and administration leads O'Connell to believe that the college as a community is very pleased with the renovations.

The changes not only improved the look of RWC, but will also give commuters a more pleasant area to socialize together and with residents. "We didn't want a separate area for commuters," O'Connell said.

The desire of the college is to give an area that will promote integration, rather than isolating commuters.

The school hired the contractor in coordination with Barnes and Noble, which runs the school's bookstore. Part of the reason was that the company agreed to pay for the renovations of the bookstore which left the college responsible only for the cost of the snack bar renovations. The total cost to the college was approximately $89,100.

There are also other new changes which are providing better services to the

More Student Papers Fighting To Get Campus Crime Reports

(CPS)--Two more student newspapers have opened battles to get their schools to let them report crimes on their campuses.

In Michigan, Oakland University's student paper, the Oakland Post, sued the university in June, demanding the release of a campus police report about the May kidnapping and rape of a student in a campus parking lot.

On the day the matter was to go to court, the school agreed to open the information to the journalists.

Similarly, student reporters at West Virginia University in Morgantown are trying to pry complete crime reports from the campus police department.

College Women Like A Combo Of 'Baby-Faced' & 'Rugged' Men

(CPS)--In a compilation of answers from women at Elmherst College in Illinois and at the universities of Georgia and Louisville, three sociologists told an American Psychological Association conference Aug. 13 that campus females think men who look "rugged but also cuddly" are the most desirable.

"The most attractive male face was intermediate rather than extremely mature or baby-faced," said sociologists Michael Cunningham and Anita Barbee of the University of Louisville and Carolyn Pike of North Carolina State University in a summary of recent research into what kind of men college women like.

In the studies, women associated features like round faces, thin eyebrows, large eyes and thin noses with "babyishness." They associated features like angular faces, large smiles and visible beard stubble with "maturity."

High School Dropout Rate Is 'Greatly Exaggerated'

(CPS)--One of four Americans drop out of high school, but "about half of them eventually return to some kind of classroom and complete their studies," contended Michael McLaughlin Aug. 13 in a study for the conservative Heritage Foundation.

The report said the widely reported "dropout crisis" is "greatly exaggerated," resulting from inconsistencies in the ways states report their dropout rates.

"In truth," McLaughlin said, "this is not the dropout rate at all. It merely is the rate of those not graduating 'on time.'"

Police Report

Monday, September 3

A large party was reported in the area of Allen Drive at 10:42 p.m. Patrolman Robert Defusco said he found 10 to 15 cars, most with out-of-state plates, in the road and a lot of people in the road trying to get into the cars and leave. Residents told the officers where the party was and the officers told the four Roger Williams College students who rent the house that they are responsible for what happens there. Their names will be put on a list kept by police, and the next time there's a complaint they will be charged, Patrolman Defusco told them.

Samaritans seek volunteers

The Samaritans, Rhode Island's suicide prevention center, is looking for volunteers who are caring, non-judgmental listeners to answer the 24 hour crisis line in the center's office at 2 Magee Street, Providence.

A new training session for crisis line volunteers is scheduled to begin Sept. 25. Evening training classes will be held at The Samaritan center. The sessions have seven, three hour classes covering befriending, depression, grief and loss, confidentiality and other issues involving suicide prevention. Volunteers can call 272-4516 to arrange for an interview.

Ambassadors Serve President

President Sicuro's idea to create a student ambassador program has become a reality. A group of 10 students now work with the president at functions like the Philharmonic concert last spring, at graduation and other functions to help make sure that everything runs smoothly.

According to Lee Ellen O'Shea, co-president of the ambassador program with Dave Geata (both seniors), the group will be giving tours on weekends to prospective students and special tours for the president. In order to fill spaces when members come and go, the dean of each school will be asked to nominate students.

If you were President Bush, how would you be handling the crisis in the Middle East?

Peter Daly
Freshman
Cape May, NJ

"I'd get the whole world to get behind them instead of just us. You can't go in, kill hostages and lose American lives"

Amy Cobral
Freshman
Brewster, Ma

"Basically I don't think one man should hold such power to make those kinds of decisions."

Britton Shinn
Freshman
Sea Girt, NJ

"I would wait for definite commitments from other countries because we're not the only country involved."

Darren Fava
Junior Cromwell, Ct.

"On the homefront I'd be looking for new energy sources so we don't get in this situation again. In Saudi Arabia I'd wait and see what their first move is and try to work with a multinational force."

Diana Navardo
Sophomore
Central Falls, RI

"I think that President Bush should have looked at other choices before he sent all the troops. He moved too quickly."

Buyers Beware: "Natural" Foods

Did you know that the words "natural" or "all natural" on a food label usually mean very little? There is no legal definition for a natural product, so that what you are buying may actually be highly processed food with large amounts of fat, preservatives and artificial flavorings. Only when applied to meat or poultry does "natural" have a strict definition by the FDA: natural meat must be only minimally processed and free of artificial ingredients. So, remember to look at the ingredients carefully, and don't assume a "natural" food or drink product is a healthy choice.

Tanning Beds- The Darker Side

Your summer tan is fading fast, and you're tempted to save that golden brown color by visiting a local tanning salon. Recent advertising claims that indoor tanning is safer than past years simply are not true. Any tan caused by exposure to ultraviolet light, whether indoors or out, damages the skin and increases the risk of skin cancer. Like the sun, tanning lamps give off two types of radiation- UVA and UVB. The UVA rays may not create painful sunburn, but they do penetrate the deepest skin layers to promote premature wrinkles, skin cancer and cataracts in the eyes.

Remember that sunlamp exposure adds to the total amount of UV radiation you get from the sun during your lifetime, increasing your chances of skin cancer. And certain medications like antibiotics, birth control pills and antihistamines may cause an allergic reaction when you tan indoors or out.

It's best not to tan, but if you must: wear the goggles at the tanning salon, limit the exposure according to skin type, and moisturize skin regularly

RWC Class of '94 Gets Hot, Sexy and Safer

On the last night of freshman Orientation, the class of '94 got more than they bargained for- a sexual experience with Suzi Landolphi, a nationally-known health educator and comedienne. They laughed, blushed and cheered as Suzi gave a more useful definition of Safe Sex. The freshmen knew that 1 in 500 college students is infected with the AIDS virus, and that sexually transmitted diseases are epidemic in young adults. So, Suzi showed them how communication, honesty and trust are the basis of safe sex and good sex. Talking with your partner about sexual diseases, condoms and "private parts" can only lead to better sexual relationships, she exclaimed.

Some comments from students about the show:

"She dared to do something different."

"It was awesome...She didn't accuse us of being homophobic, judgmental and uninformed about AIDS. I learned ways to talk to people about sex without feeling so embarrassed or stupid. Thumbs up!"

"I didn't know a condom could stretch that much."

"I'm gonna get my friends at other schools to come next time- they need it."
