STEPHEN M. PRIGNANO, ESQ.

Steve has practiced law in Rhode Island for 30 years, first as a partner at the former Edwards & Angell LLP, and more recently as a partner at McIntyre Tate LLP. Throughout his career he has shown a deep and abiding commitment to the lawyer's professional responsibility to serve the community and those unable to afford legal help. Steve has participated in, supported, championed, and provided invaluable advice and counsel to the Pro Bono Collaborative (PBC) since its creation in 2006. As a founding member of the PBC's Advisory Board, Steve was instrumental in developing strategies to make the PBC sustainable and provided a thoughtful and critical voice to the Board's programmatic discussions. Steve brought his firm into the PBC as a leading pro bono partner, one of the PBC's most enduring and active partners for over 10 years. In two recent PBC projects, Steve expended innumerable hours providing pro bono legal service to the H.O.P.E. Federal Re-Entry Court and its participants. He also represented the PBC Advisory Board in drafting and submitting an amicus brief and official comments to the RI Supreme Court on limited scope representation, an issue critically important to access to justice. Steve has also been an active and award-winning participant in the RI Bar Association's pro bono program.

2017 Community Partner Champion

RHODE ISLAND MEDICAL-LEGAL PARTNERSHIP

The RI Medical-Legal Partnership (MLP) was established to combat the legal issues interfering with the health and safety of children and families. Housed at Hasbro Children's Hospital and Memorial Hospital's Family Care Center, the MLP works in collaboration with the Rhode Island Center for Law and Public Policy, Brown Medical School, hospital staff, and RWU Law students to provide holistic legal representation to families where social conditions (e.g., unsafe housing with lead or mold) impact children's health. The Partnership's Program Director, Jeannine Casselman, has advocated on behalf of thousands of children and their families during her tenure. Despite an enormous caseload of clients and limited funding, the MLP not only provides high quality legal services, but also takes the time to train and engage RWU Law students through externships, summer internships, and pro bono projects. Through Jeannine's mentorship and passion, our law students have learned how to be compassionate, creative, and zealous advocates. Additionally, in partnership with RWU Law's Pro Bono Collaborative, the MLP has engaged law firms and individual attorneys in pro bono special education law and guardianship matters. The MLP has been an extraordinary community partner to RWU Law and we are honored to be a part of the important work that they do.
