This year, five law students and two pro bono attorneys, spent every other Friday afternoon in the medium facility at the Adult Correctional Institution. During each visit, Pro Bono Collaborative attorneys Dawn Euer and John Karwashin, supervised law students Alex Terry (2L), Shea
Griffin (2L), Peter Sabian (3L), Amanda Seekin (2L) and Autumn Guarnaccia (2L) to identify inmates’ civil legal issues and decide whether there was legal information or advice that could be provided to inmates or whether additional research was need to assist them. This year, the project worked with over 50 inmates on discrete civil issues ranging from child support to handwritten wills.
Alternative Spring Break started in 2005 by the Association for Public Interest Law (APIL) and has grown into a large and successful program placing students in local and national pro bono legal service projects during spring break. The 2018 program was one of the largest and most successful in history with 53 participants working on 18 different projects in 8 different states and Puerto Rico. Twelve of our trips were hosted by RWU Law alumni, many of whom participated in ASB when they were students at RWU Law.
The first RWU Law Alternative Spring Break in 2005 took students to New Orleans in the wake of Hurricane Katrina. ASB 2018 harkened back to these roots with a trip to San Juan Puerto Rico to work with Ayuda Legal Huracan Maria (ALHM), which in cooperation with local community organizations, provided legal aid brigades throughout Puerto Rico’s 78 municipalities following Hurricane Maria. RWU Law student volunteers worked alongside students from Columbia, Harvard and Yale.
Since September 2016, Locke Lord LLP has been providing pro bono representation to low-income families who are eligible for 601A waivers (a special waiver for families of immigrants to stay together during legalization process). The project receives referrals from Dorcas International.
Institute of RI in Providence. A team of attorneys from Locke Lord LLP and RWU Law students provide full representation for individuals applying for a 601A waiver.

RWU Law Alums Providing Pro Bono Through the Pro Bono Collaborative

Brian A. Fielding, Esq. L‘10 of Adler Cohen Harvey Wakeman & Gueguenian LLP is supervising a RWU Law student and assisting families served by the Medical Legal Partnership and other organizations by addressing their children’s special education legal needs.

Jenna Algee Giguere, Esq. L’12 is supervising our law students on our ACI Women’s Facility Civil Legal Clinics Project. During the semester she supervises our law students as they interview inmates and provide civil legal advice and counsel.

Dawn Euer, Esq. L’10, Josh Xavier Esq. L’14, and Brett Beaubien, Esq. L’16 are supervising attorneys on our ACI Medium Facility Civil Legal Clinics Project. During the Spring semester they supervise our law students as they interview inmates and provide civil advice and counsel.

John Karwashan, Esq. L’15 was a supervising attorney on the project for two years until he joined the RI Public Defender and became conflicted out.
At the heart of RWU Law’s Pro Bono Collaborative and the Pro Bono Experiential Learning Requirement is the goal of instilling in our law students a pro bono ethic that will lead them to continue providing pro bono legal service as attorneys. We are always thrilled to see RWU Law alums display this pro bono ethic and we are especially proud to report that many former law students are now serving as pro bono attorneys and supervising attorneys on our PBC projects. Thank you to these wonderful alums. (Slide 1 of 3)
RWU Law Alums Providing Pro Bono Through the Pro Bono Collaborative

Ken Rampino, Esq. L’08 is providing community presentations and health care proxy clinics throughout the state as part of the Elder Law and End-of-Life Planning Project.

Amy Goins, Esq. L’12 and Peter Skwirz, Esq. L’12 are now providing pro bono legal service and supervising law students on our McAuley House Expungement Project. Throughout the year, Amy and Peter attend monthly clinics at McAuley House, a family style meal site for homeless people on Elmwood Avenue in Providence, where they, along with two law students, meet with anyone interested in talking to an attorney about their criminal record. Amy and Peter are going into their third year on the project. As law students, both Amy and Peter participated in the Expungement Project.

Matt Plain, Esq. L’05 of Barton Gilman LLP is participating in our Guardianship Project with Bradley Hospital’s Center for Autism and Developmental Disabilities, assisting parents of disabled children turning 18 by providing advice and counsel regarding their options and, where appropriate, establishing legal guardianship of their children.

Rui Alves, Esq. L’05 of Barton Gilman LLP and Joe Farside, Esq. L’06 of Locke Lord LLP are providing Family Law assistance to participants of the H.O.P.E. Federal Re-Entry Court Project.

Samantha M. Vasques, Esq. L’14 and Benjamin Rackliffe, Esq. L’07 of Pannone Lopes Devereaux & O’Gara LLC provide legal advice, counsel and representation to non-profit organizations that serve low-income communities.

Dave Pellegrino, Esq. L’05 of Partridge Snow & Hahn LLP is participating in our Special Immigrant Juvenile Status Project, providing direct legal representation to children applying for Special Immigrant Juvenile status—a pathway to citizenship for children who have been abused, neglected, or abandoned by their caregivers and cannot return to their home country.

Kelly Rafferty Meara, Esq. L’11 and Angelina Landi, Esq. L’12 are both serving as subject matter experts available for PBC law student consultation on SSI/SSDI and Family Law issues, respectively.

Honoring the 2019 Champions

Robert J. McConnell, Esq.

Robert J. McConnell (Bob) has practiced law in Rhode Island at the law firm of Motley Rice LLC for over 25 years. A graduate of Suffolk University School of Law and Brown University, Bob has devoted his legal career to protecting the lives and rights of those harmed by asbestos, lead paint and tobacco. He presently is involved in litigation throughout the country against the opioid industry. He has represented hundreds of asbestos victims who have been injured and died from asbestos exposure. He has represented numerous children injured by lead poisoning and secured the largest lead paint poisoning settlement in Rhode Island on behalf of a child.

In 2014 he was a member of his firm’s trial team that received Public Justice’s Trial Lawyers of the Year Award for obtaining a judgment against former manufacturers of lead pigment ordering the abatement of lead paint from homes in California. In addition, Bob serves on the boards of several organizations devoted to improving the lives of the disenfranchised. For the past seven years he has been board chair of the Institute for the Study and Practice of Nonviolence that seeks to promote nonviolence among young people in Rhode Island’s inner cities, based on Dr. Martin Luther King’s principles and practices of nonviolence. He also has been a long time board member of the George Wiley Center that fights to reduce utility costs and the harmful effects of utility shutoffs by organizing and empowering those individuals most affected.

In 2015, Bob was appointed as Housing Court judge in Central Falls, overseeing the rehabilitation of a number of abandoned properties throughout the city. Bob has actively supported the Pro Bono Collaborative since its inception, taking on fraudulent foreclosure practices and assisting immigrant families, among other projects, and serving on the PBC’s Advisory Board.

Diana deGroof, Esq. L ’03

Diana deGroof has devoted her career to serving low-income clients at Rhode Island Legal Services (RILS). She came to law school determined to serve marginalized communities and has never wavered from that path. Throughout her fifteen years at RILS, Diana has worked in a wide range of practice areas including child welfare and family law, housing, disability, and public benefits. She has mentored dozens of RWU law students. Diana is active in the community and currently serves on the Board of Project Weber-Renew, an organization that provides peer-based harm reduction and recovery services including HIV prevention and testing, needle exchange, support groups, basic needs and case management for at-risk populations including sex workers, transgender sex-workers and high risk women and men.

She has previously served on the Child Custody and Visitation Solutions (CCVS) Project of the RI Coalition against Domestic Violence, the RI Works Community Advisory Committee, and the Advisory Board of the Feinstein Institute for Legal Service - now the Feinstein Center for Pro Bono & Experiential Education. Diana is a recipient of the RI Coalition for the Homeless Legal Clinic Award., and she is a long-time member of RWU Law’s Public Interest Loan Repayment Assistance Program Selection Committee.

While at RWU Law School, Diana was a leader in the public interest community. She worked at several public interest organizations including the RI Office of the Mental Health Advocate, the Immigration Law Education and Advocacy Project of Catholic Social Services in Fall River, and participated in the RWU Disability Law Clinic. She was also awarded a Massachusetts Bar Foundation Fellowship for her summer work at Legal Services for the Cape and Islands. She served as the co-chair of the Association for Public Interest Law and was a leader in the pro bono Women in Transition Project providing educational workshops for women at the ACI.

Rhode Island Public Defender - Community Partner Champion

The Rhode Island Public Defender was created in 1941 and is believed to be the first statewide full service public defender office established in the United States. The dedicated and committed lawyers in the office defend adults and juveniles accused of committing crimes and represent parents who are threatened with loss of custody of their children because of neglect or abuse allegations. Supported by professional social workers, investigators and interpreters, the office represents clients in state court proceedings from the first appearance before a judge through trial or hearing, as well as through appeal if necessary. The office mission statement sets out the goal of providing “client-centered advice, holistic representation and zealous advocacy with support from our team of advocates, social workers, investigators, interpreters and other staff,” with a commitment to treating its clients “with dignity, compassion and fairness.” The office lives up to that goal and commitment on a daily basis. Attorneys in the office have been mentoring RWU Law students – and hiring RWU Law graduates – since the law school opened its doors.

Each year, dozens of RWU Law students accept unpaid public interest summer internships at amazing organizations in RI and around the country. Last summer, 28 students received public interest summer stipends and provided over 8800 hours of legal service in organizations such as The Rhode Island Public Defender, Rhode Island Legal Services, Inc., RI Center for Justice, Providence Youth Student Movement
February 5, 2019

Thanks so much to the many of you who made this year’s Champions for Justice fundraiser another great success. Your support for the Feinstein Center for Pro Bono & Experiential Education and the many experiential programs that connect our law students to communities in need raised $128,375.

RWU Law

Our whole-hearted thanks to the hundreds of people who supported the 2019 Champions for Justice Event. Because of you, the evening was a remarkable success.

Your support for the Feinstein Center for Pro Bono & Experiential Education and the many experiential programs that connect law students to communities in need raised $128,375!! Thank you for helping to provide the resources RWU Law needs to continue and expand this vital work.
This year’s event gathered the bench and the bar along with our faculty, staff, students and friends—nearly 500 guests in all—to celebrate the accomplishments of our distinguished Champions: Robert J. McConnell, Esq., Diana deGroof, Esq. L'03 and The Rhode Island Public Defender. Their efforts to ensure access to justice are of critical importance and their commitment is a shining example to us all.

The evening was a wonderful affirmation of the shared values that unite us as a legal community. Please click on the images below to view the photos from the evening.

Many thanks again for your generous support of Champions for Justice and RWU Law. I hope you will save the date, January 24, 2020, for next year’s celebration.
Best,

Michael J. Yelnosky
Dean and Professor of Law
