On Friday the American Indian Law Students Association (AILSAs) sponsored a "Drum Circle" in front of the law school. The Eastern Medicine Singers, led by Chief Blackeagle, performed traditional music from various Algonquin tribes.

Organized by 2L Orla Power (ALISA President) and ALISA founder Raymond "Two Hawks" Watson, an appreciative crowd of faculty, staff, and students experienced words, music, and dancing that would have been familiar to the Wampanoags who lived in the area for centuries before the founding of Roger Williams University.

What a terrific way to begin the new academic year while honoring those who came before us.
