

7-28-2016

Newsroom: From Undocumented to Immigration Lawyer 7/28/2016

Maria Sacchetti
The Boston Globe

Roger Williams University School of Law

Follow this and additional works at: https://docs.rwu.edu/law_archives_life

Part of the Immigration Law Commons, Legal Education Commons, and the Legal Profession Commons

Recommended Citation

Sacchetti, Maria and Roger Williams University School of Law, "Newsroom: From Undocumented to Immigration Lawyer 7/28/2016" (2016). Life of the Law School (1993-). 563.
https://docs.rwu.edu/law_archives_life/563

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Archives & Law School History at DOCS@RWU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Life of the Law School (1993-) by an authorized administrator of DOCS@RWU. For more information, please contact mwu@rwu.edu.

Newsroom

July 28, 2016

From Undocumented to Immigration Lawyer

The Boston Globe tracks '14 alum Antonio Viana's inspiring personal journey from undocumented immigrant to immigration lawyer.

From The Boston Globe: "He couldn't get a visa and he couldn't get deported. So he went to law school instead." by Maria Sacchetti Antonio Massa Viana was a star law student at Roger Williams University. He edited the law review and triumphed in the moot court competition. The Supreme Court chief justice knew his name. He was also in the United States illegally, diving headlong into a profession where the laws were literally stacked against him. Except in Massachusetts, where in 2014 Viana became the first known unauthorized immigrant to earn a law license.

"A lot of people told me 'you're never going to be able to go to law school' because of my status," Viana, a 39-year-old from Brazil, said in one of a series of interviews in recent months. "It hasn't been easy at all, but here I am."

July 26, 2016: Antonio Massa Viana was a star law student at Roger Williams University. He edited the law review and triumphed in the moot court competition. The Supreme Court chief justice knew his name.

He was also in the United States illegally, diving headlong into a profession where the laws were literally stacked against him. Except in Massachusetts, where in 2014 Viana became the first known unauthorized immigrant to earn a law license.

"A lot of people told me 'you're never going to be able to go to law school' because of my status," Viana, a 39-year-old from Brazil, said in one of a series of interviews in recent months. "It hasn't been easy at all, but here I am."