

5-2018

A Rising Star: Maria Viveiros, RWU Class of 2017 (May 2018)

Roger Williams University School of Law

Follow this and additional works at: https://docs.rwu.edu/law\_archives\_life

 Part of the Business Organizations Law Commons, Contracts Commons, Health Law and Policy Commons, Immigration Law Commons, Legal Education Commons, and the Legal Profession Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Roger Williams University School of Law, "A Rising Star: Maria Viveiros, RWU Class of 2017 (May 2018)" (2018). Life of the Law School (1993- ). 636.

https://docs.rwu.edu/law\_archives\_life/636

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Archives & Law School History at DOCS@RWU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Life of the Law School (1993- ) by an authorized administrator of DOCS@RWU. For more information, please contact mwu@rwu.edu.

A Rising Star

Maria Viveiros, RWU Class of 2017

Juris Doctor
Alumni

Maria Viveiros was born in Rhode Island. Her mother is a Guatemalan immigrant who came to the United States to try to build a better life for her daughters. Maria graduated with distinction from Shea High School in Pawtucket, and then she attended Brown University, from which she graduated in 2008 with a B.S. in Sociology.

Maria was just getting started. She went to work as a benefits client analyst at CVS/Caremark, where she helped design and manage pharmacy benefit plans for large employers. In 2010 she was recruited to join UnitedHealthcare as a state Medicaid program manager. On the side (believe it or not) she earned an M.B.A in Healthcare Management. When she applied to RWU Law in 2013 her boss at UnitedHealthcare described her as “a rising star.”

Her boss was right. Maria became the Associate Director of Compliance at UnitedHealthcare just over a year after she matriculated as a part-time student here in fall of 2013. Maria told me that RWU Law was the only place where she could pursue her career and educational goals at the same time. It was not just the location, she says, but also the culture at the school. She found the faculty, staff, and students to be flexible and supportive of her at all times.

However, make no mistake. Maria has worked hard for everything she has achieved. She works in the evenings and on weekends to keep up, and she has had to take summer and evening classes whenever possible. Her academic work has been outstanding, and she has been able to complete all her degree requirements in just one extra year of study.

Remarkably, she has also been able to participate fully in the public interest and experiential programs that are a hallmark of the RWU Law experience. Maria participated in the Pro Bono Collaborative U Visa Project, which offers victims of domestic violence legal assistance in seeking nonimmigrant visas. She also participated in an Alternative Spring Break Project that sent students to San Antonio, Texas to work with the Refugee and Immigrant Center for Education and Legal Services, an organization dedicated to helping families, adults, and unaccompanied children seek legal relief from deportation. In both of these projects Maria was able to apply her legal knowledge and her fluency in Spanish to assist people in dire need.

Maria was also able to participate in RWU Law's unique Corporate Counsel Externship Program which was able to assist Maria in finding a placement within UnitedHealthcare's general counsel's office so she could begin to work more directly with, among other things, the legal aspects of the growing field of corporate compliance. Maria credits the law school with helping her develop skills in legal research, legal writing, statutory interpretation, and contract drafting, in addition to helping her learn foundational substantive law and special subjects that will be of great value to her in her career.

Her most memorable moment in law school came just months ago when she travelled with a group of honors students to D.C. to watch argument in the United States Supreme Court, meet with one of the lawyers after his argument concluded, and observe part of the confirmation hearing of Justice Neil Gorsuch.

Maria intends to continue to work in the legal department at UnitedHealthcare, and because Connecticut recently adopted the uniform bar exam, passing that exam allows her to practice law in over twenty-five jurisdictions.