Friends:

Thank you for supporting the 2009 Public Interest Law Auction. This event is managed entirely by students, overseen by the Feinstein Institute for Legal Service, and sponsored by the Law School’s Association for Public Interest Law (APIL) and the Student Bar Association.

Auction proceeds support law students engaging in important, volunteer legal internships serving the disenfranchised, underrepresented populations across Rhode Island and Southeastern Massachusetts. With the 27 Summer Public Interest Stipends funded by the Auction last year, law students were able to:

- work on discrimination cases for the Rhode Island Commission on Human Rights.
- study environmental legislation in Rhode Island.
- represent less fortunate Rhode Islanders in criminal and family law cases.

As you think about what Auction items will get your bid, and how high you are willing to go, please be as generous as possible. With your attendance, purchase of raffle tickets and enthusiastic bidding, we’re able to support life-changing legal work, and you might end up winning something great. Additionally, for the first time ever, our Auction includes work from more than fifty local artists and artisans, with half of the selling price of each piece going back to the artist who created it. In this way your high bid supports the public interest work at the School of Law as well as your local arts community.

Thank you again for your support.

Best Wishes and Good Luck,
The 2009 Public Interest Auction Committee
