Dear Friend of the Pro Bono Collaborative,

Next week is National Pro Bono Celebration Week. We are thrilled to be celebrating the amazing pro bono work that has been done through the law firms, law students and community organizations that, together, are the Pro Bono Collaborative.

In this newsletter you'll learn about some fabulous events happening next week in honor of Pro Bono Celebration Week, as well as new Pro Bono Collaborative projects and on ongoing pro bono project updates.

Also, for those of you who do not already know, we are excited to announce that the Pro Bono Collaborative has been fully integrated into the newly reorganized Feinstein Center for Pro Bono & Experiential Education at RWU School of Law. More on that soon.

Best,
Eliza & Suzy
P.S. Looking ahead, please SAVE THE DATE of May 29, 2014 for the 5th Annual PBC Fundraising Cocktail Reception.

In his eight years at the Center, Shayana has worked on a number of significant cases in the wake of 9/11, including the Center’s challenges to the detention of prisoners at Guantánamo Bay (among them torture victim Mohammed al Qahtani and former CIA ghost detainee Majid Khan), which have twice reached the Supreme Court, and several cases arising out of the post-9/11 domestic immigration sweeps. He is also counsel in CCR’s legal challenges to the “material support” statute (decided by the Supreme Court last term), to the low rates of black firefighter hiring in New York City, and to the NSA’s warrantless surveillance program.

Film Night: "American Winter"

Tuesday, October 22, 2013 - 5:45 p.m. in Room 283

RSVP to feinsteincenter@rwu.edu

Join Dean Logan, APIL and the Feinstein Center as we view the gripping documentary, "American Winter." The film presents a snapshot of the state of our society as it exists for millions of Americans across the country. The film follows eight Oregon families battling to keep their heads above water while facing overwhelming financial challenges and a shrinking social safety net. The devastating effects of the mortgage lending crisis, soaring unemployment, a broken healthcare system, and budget cuts to the social services are presented through the eyes of these families, all falling into poverty for the first time and struggling to keep their kids fed, clothed, and with a roof over their heads. After the film there will be a Q&A via Skype with Chuck Sheketoff, Executive Director at the Oregon Center for Public Policy, who is featured prominently in the film. Please bring an item of canned food. We will donate these canned goods to Bristol Good Neighbors Soup Kitchen, Food Pantry and Day Shelter.

Thank you to all of our partners who will be providing pro bono legal services through our many projects during Pro Bono Celebration Week:

Pro Bono Collaborative Project News:

Sargent Center Wills and Guardianship Project - In spring 2013, the law firm of Edwards Wildman LLP began a partnership with the Sargent Center’s Regional Resource Center to provide presentations and "mini-clinics" on issues involving simple wills, guardianship and alternatives to guardianship. The first presentation was held in April and over 20 people attended. A three-part series begins on October 16th.
Year Up Project - On October 2, Christopher Ayers, Esq. of Burns & Levinson LLP provided a criminal rights and expungement presentation to over 65 students of Year Up.

Labor and Employment for Non-Profits - On September 17th, Meghan Siket, Esq. of Whelan Kinder & Siket LLP provided a presentation on labor and employment best practices for non-profit managers at the Rhode Island Foundation. The presentation was interesting, practical and full of useful information. Representatives from 25 local non-profit organizations benefited from Meghan’s wisdom and advice.

Khadarlis Expungement Project - On October 18th, the law firm of Nixon Peabody LLP will host an expungement legal presentation and clinic at Khadarlis in the Lillian Feinstein Senior Center in Providence.

Public Interest Law Center Project - This fall, six RWU Law students signed on to assist the firm of DeLuca & Weizenbaum Ltd. in conducting the research necessary to the firm’s development of a public interest law center. In addition to these projects, the Pro Bono Collaborative has added three projects that, in the past, were primarily student driven projects. We are thrilled to bring these great projects under the Pro Bono Collaborative umbrella:
ACI Prison Civil Legal Advice & Counsel Clinic Project- Each Wednesday night during the fall semester, seven law students and attorney Stephen Miller go into the ACI medium security facility and provide brief advice and counsel to inmates on civil matters. The law students receive a unique opportunity to hone their interviewing skills, while inmates receive the rare opportunity to speak with an attorney and law students.

Street Law - RWU Law has been involved in the national Street Law Program for many years. This year, through the coordination of attorney Dianne Baron, we have law students working with students and young people at Central High School, Blackstone Academy, Community Prep, Providence YMCA and Youth Pride. Throughout the year, RWU Law students will provide legal education on a variety of topics to each of their partnering schools/organizations.

Volunteer Tax Income Project (VITA) - Law students will be working with East Bay Community Action Program to provide tax preparation assistance to low-income Rhode Islanders from January through April 2014. This year, we are also hoping to host an all day tax preparation fair at RWU Law staffed almost entirely by RWU Law students.

Join a Pro Bono Collaborative Project:
