Obscenity out in city of Bristol:

Town Council in Uproar over rally

An article appearing in the Bristol Phoenix, newspaper of May 7, 1971, promised that the Bristol residents will take strong action if "obscene" language is used again during rallies in that city. John F. Victor, a Hope Street resident, said that he thought the group had the right to demonstrate but not to use the type of language they employed.

The group in question consisted of about 100 Roger Williams students that conducted an anti-war march into the city of Bristol on May 5. The Bristol Town Council met on May 6, 1971 and took a strong stand against such demonstrations in the future.

"That type of language will not be allowed in the town of Bristol," said Council President John Faris. "It may be all right in some other places but it's not all right here. The community will not stand for it, and the Council will not stand for it.

The Chief of Police commented that those kids represent a small minority of the kids at the college and he added, "I guarantee you that kind of trouble won't happen again. It has been and will be slipped in the back."

History Dept. Announces

New Course Offerings

After months of study and discussion amongst themselves, with students, instructors from other areas, and an outside consultant, the History area has released plans for its new program and new course offerings to be effective as of September, 1971.

The changes that will effect most students are in the basic survey course and the introduction of what are hoped to be, exciting Freshmen seminars. As to the former, the decision that the entire course of European history can satisfactorily be covered in two fifteen-week semesters has been abandoned. Instead, the student will have an opportunity to study in greater depth the development of modern Europe from one revolution until the French revolution in History III, and from 1860 until the present in History 112. It is hoped that in making these changes, the relevance of history will be more evident, and that a better understanding of the development of modern history will result from this greater intensification of study. For those interested in ancient and medieval history, these subjects will be covered respectively in 200 and 300 level courses.

The courses in National histories of Germany, Russia, England, and France, which are currently restricted to Juniors and Seniors, will be restructured and made available to freshmen and sophomores as well as upper classmen. This will provide an opportunity for students to skip the full course of European history and take courses that are more in line with their particular interests.

A. A. and B. A. degrees -- that RWC will eventually establish urban studies campus in Pawtucket and "Scope and Content." RWC will offer credit and certificate courses in child development, para-medical health techniques, urban planning, drug abuse, youth group work, counselling techniques and community organization. Also the amount and types of courses required for employment in Model Cities.

The New Goals as stated by Dean Zani, the college's political and economic expertise, are to familiarize the people of the area. By understanding what is going on around them, they will be able to make their neighborhoods better.

The New Goals as stated by Mr. Hagopian: "There are the immediate goals of making persons employable and the long range goals of bringing education and the college to Pawtucket. How well are these goals being implemented? According to the Chief of Police, "...we've been guided by our contractual obligations, rather than pursuing our own subjective thoughts. This is not a willy-nilly operation.

According to an instructor who taught in the initial stage "...there's just a conglomeration of work compounded with no specific programs to meet community needs."

According to some students in the program, "...the courses are great but we would really need..."

Big Ben Kings for Theatre Department

Next year, Roger Williams will sponsor a London Theatre Program in Mayfair in this country of London, England. Director is Mr. William Grangeton of RWC. The Theatre Program has been established to provide the normal curriculum of the junior year for theatre majors at RWC. It is open to majors from other areas in the college and to students from member schools of the Union for Experimenting Colleges and Universities with permission of their academic advisors. The program is also available to students from other colleges within the limitations of space. Such students should secure from their major advisors precise statements regarding the transferability of individual courses before submitting an application.

The London Branch Campus of RWC is housed at Trendenham House, 2 Berkeley Street in the beautiful Mayfair district of London only two blocks from Hyde Park's famous Marble Arch. The Upper Berkeley Street address, just off Edgware Road, is convenient to a large variety of shops and restaurants and is within pleasant walking distance of Piccadilly Circus.

Address application and all inquiries concerning the program to: Mr. William Grangeton, director, The London Theatre Program, RWC, Bristol, R. 1.,
Could the difficulty have come with the faculty he has worked with? This thesis has no validity. Every one of us has been tried out with Mr. Ranucci, was contacted, unrestrainedly praised his diligence, his helpfulness and his creative approaches to problems mutually addressed. Well then, it must be that the student administrators at the college. It was really, for nothing of these, so some of them will talk about Mr. Ranucci's recognized competence. They are aware of his supervisory efforts in cooperating with the college to better meet the needs of his students. Like the Child Development and Teacher Training A.A. program which he was instrumental in utilizing interest in and galvanizing college personnel and others to design. This program promises to be of significance to everyone of these entire college? His involvement in the University Without Walls group has led Mr. Ranucci to believe that Roger Williams has not gone totally unnoticed. And his program which has he has been previously referred to, a few of whom these men failed to recognize. Well then, damnit, what was the program run out of the Providence Campus under the Providence Dem, Dean Frank Zannini? Could it have been a problem? Well, Mr. Ranucci isn't a cowing toady, so it is probable that this was the case. And Mr. Ranucci is of, at least, average intelligence and he used that intelligence and whatever sensibility he possessed in directing his program. This also suggests an incompatibility which probably led to friction. Could Mr. Ranucci's innovative approach to problem planning have been a plan which he was forced to account for Zannini? Well, it is true that armadillos won't fly even when instructed. Ah, who knows? The least that could be said is that there is something curious and unfortunate about all this.

Friends of Challenge

This past semester several students from Roger Williams College have been actively engaged in a tutoring program at the Adult Correctional Institution of Rhode Island. The program was formulated by Mike Katz, Bristol, sociology teacher R.W.C., in conjunction with an all-college program entitled "Friends of Challenge." The tutoring program has been continued into the yearly curriculum at R.W.C. as a 3 credit seminar course.

We are trying to provide a beneficial service to both student and inmate, and given greater threat it could become a major process toward more successful rehabilitation in our present penal systems. However, to maintain the program it could become a major process to adopt an all-college program such as the one at R.W.C. and have all students from Roger Williams continue over the summer semester.

As such, a new iteration of the program will be required to those who wish to continue to participate. In addition, we are looking for those interested to please contact either Mr. Warner, Mike Katz, or, as such I'd be happy to call.

National Officers and give expression to the viewpoints of students across the country. In the course of the nine day affair, delegates are confronted by workshops, speakers, media presentations, and formal plenary sessions typically laden with parliamentary maneuvering and politicking.
